Tradition

We Can't Escape

Chagrin Falls High School
400 East Washington
Chagrin Falls, Ohio 44022

Zenith 1995 Volume 85

The traditional Blossom Time Festival, 1994 and 1964 reveals the communities commitment to tradition. The setting remains the same. Only the visitors who enjoy the carnival at Riverside Park have changed.

Tradition

We Can't Escape

Change comes slowly to Chagrin Falls. The graduate who returns after being away for years can feel quite at home as he visits the landmarks that seemingly never change. 19th Century homes and buildings seem to cry out to the community to resist the encroachment of the 21st Century. We even refer to the town as a "village," a place that attempts to preserve the character and flavor of small town America, and where initiating a change is sometimes tantamount to climbing Mount Everest.

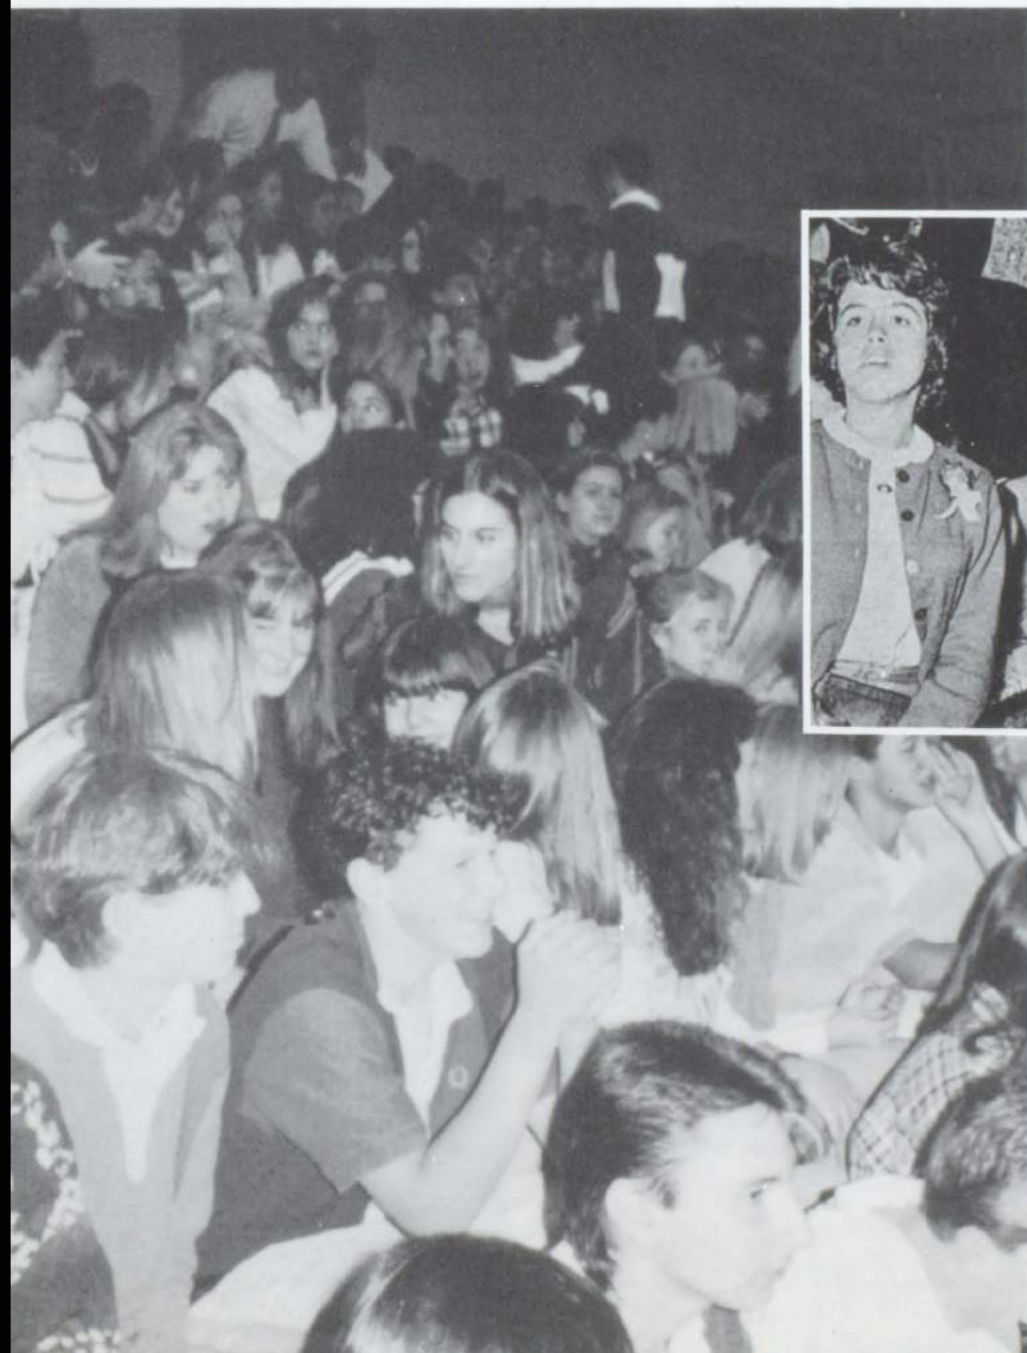

We expected that this same traditional spirit carries over to the Chagrin Falls High School students of the 90's. We were right. In a Zenith poll conducted in the fall of the year, we discovered that over one-half of the student body not only approve of our community and school traditions, we actually relish them. Of fifteen traditions listed in our poll, the majority of students wanted no change, while the rest opted for just one change.

Left and below: Faces may change, but the Homecoming court's anticipation of the evening's events remains the same.

Both team mascot Mortimer and the cheerleading outfits have undergone numerous facelifts since this 1964 cheerleading photo.

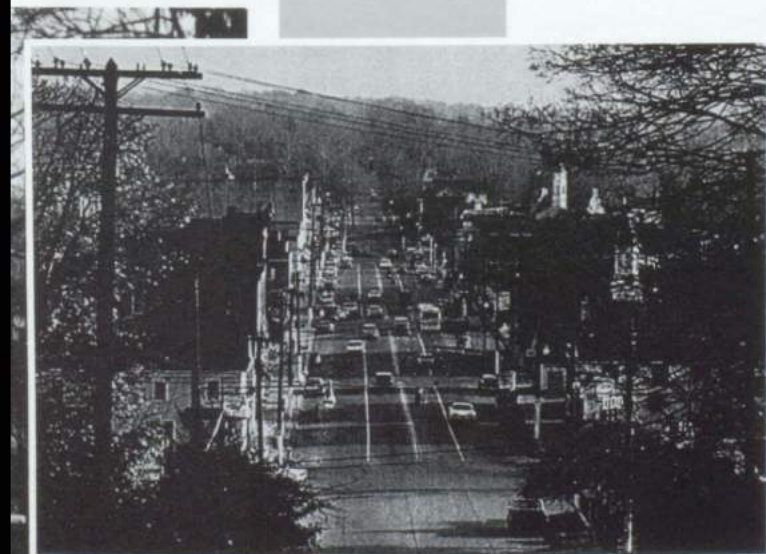

Grove Hill- the sight of the traditional "Pumpkin Roll", offers a view of town that has changed very little over the decades.

Thirty years ago the highschool basketball scene was dominated by the boys, as shown in the photo below. But this is one tradition that has given way over the years to girls inter-scholastic participation. (Right)

Even more significantly, well over half of the student body said that if it were possible, they would like to return to Chagrin Falls to live after their schooling is completed.

We found that perhaps by the very nature of our environment, we can't escape tradition, nor does it seem very evident that we particularly want to. We're comfortable where we are, and maybe that's why many of us want to stay where we are. Finally, the 1995 Zenith is dedicated to all of us who unwaveringly want to stay the course, -- to all of us who want to and who have helped to keep the Chagrin tradition alive.

Student Life

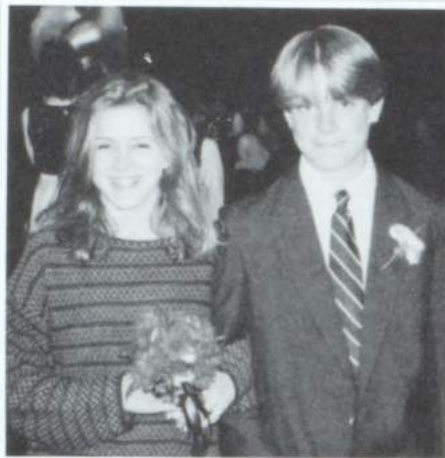

Our student life is Ad-Mired in Tradition

The bonfire sputtered and smoked as the wet wood tried to resist all the coaxing of hundreds of students at the annual homecoming pep rally. As the drizzling autumn rain turned the dirt to mud under our feet, and as students intentionally became mired in the mess, we are reminded of yet another tradition that is Chagrin. We are one of the few remaining high schools to keep alive the tradition of the homecoming parade and bonfire. From as far back as anyone can remember there seems to have always been a parade, a bonfire, an OABR, a pumpkin roll, a Blossom Time, a Senior Week, the fall plays, and the spring musicals. Students, teachers, administrators, have come and gone, but all of them have had to embrace or at least contend with our traditions. Is it not remarkable that these traditions, unique to our school and community, somehow continue? Admittedly, they have been modified over the years, but they have in a sense taken on a life of their own. It would be interesting to see what traditions will stay intact 20 years from now. Imagine some Chagrin student amusing himself as he leafs through this old 1995 yearbook in the year 2015. As he stops to look through the Student Life section, will he find a similarity between his "traditions" and ours? Will they be recognizable? Or will they have evolved to some other form of student activity? We think they will be the same. Chagrin traditions are a powerful force and difficult to escape if the last 20 years is any indicator.

It is true that tradition can become like the mud on the field--a mire--inescapable, confining, and altogether unmovable. But most of us will agree that whether it's the mud of the field or the goo of pumpkin mush, it's sticky, it's messy, but it binds us together.....friends to friends, past to present, and present to future.

Brad Mellquham and Christie Holtz played brother and sister in the fall production of Our Town.

It took some time for the soggy pile to catch fire, but after gallons of kerosene the 1994 Homecoming bonfire sprang to life.

DOWNPOUR '94

Rain, rain, go away, come again another day. This was the theme of the 1994 Homecoming Bonfire. The rain came down in torrents, but the diehards stuck it out. Fall was in the air. You could smell the odor of burning wood, see the changing colors of leaves, and hear the exuberant voices of people living out a tradition. Much to everyone's chagrin the parade was canceled; the bonfire, however, raged on, but it took some work due to the inclement conditions.

Gallons of lighter fluid, combustible materials, gave way to wisps of misleading smoke, and after what seemed like an eternity, the first bright flames of the bon fire appeared. Tentatively, as the flames crawled toward the top, they licked at the outer boundaries of the teepee made of wood. At the same time, daring seniors began jumping from their perches atop the mountain of wood, as their attempts at spreading the fire succeeded.

As everyone basked in the heat of the bonfire and watched the Kenston dummy burn, the mud started to fly. I guess if anyone ever wanted to mud wrestle, this was the time to do it, or at least be satisfied listening to our shoes make squelching noises in the mud and contemplate how great it was to be a senior. It may have even occurred to just a few of us that some day we were going to have to grow up and be mature adults. While the choice would be ours to make, we chose on this night to be kids, goofing around in the light of the fire.

Even though it was pouring rain, and everyone was soaking wet and cold, we still smiled, laughed, and had fun. Another Homecoming Bonfire had occurred, marking the celebration of tradition, the changing of the seasons, and the passage of time.

DANCIN' THE NIGHT AWAY

The Commons was all decked out for the event, inviting the couples to join in the dancing and fun of the occasion. The Homecoming Dance was simply the highlight of a fun-filled week of activities such as the Pep Rally, Bonfire, and the Homecoming games, all which generated excitement for the dance. "I was really excited to be a part of this year's Homecoming festivities", commented Junior attendant Amanda Dallas. Weeks were spent in preparation for the "big night" as students shopped, made dinner reservations, bought corsages and boutonnieres, and planned the evening. "The dance gave me the opportunity to get dressed up and be with my friends in a different setting", remarked Emily Bultinck. Music filled the air as Scott Barr played a variety of songs for the students to dance to, while the Commons provided a place for friends to socialize as well as enjoy refreshments. The freshmen fit right in to what, for most, was their first dance. Likewise, the Seniors made the most of their last high school Homecoming. Many people this year opted to attend the dance stag or with groups of people. Perhaps that is a sign that this is, after all, the "90's" and times are changing. But whether students came with friends or a date, everyone joined in on the fun and excitement of another fabulous and memorable Homecoming weekend.

POWDER PUFF EXTRAVAGANZA

On a cold, rainy Sunday in October the Senior and Junior Women engaged in a titanic struggle. In an intense game the juniors triumphed over the senior girls 19-0. Mindi Sanders and Betsy Sutliff quarterbacked the seniors, but efforts to score were turned back by a tenacious junior defense. Quarterbacking the juniors were Kory Haase and Meghan Gilkey. Scoring the touchdowns for the junior women was Christine Knirsch, while Daria Wyszynski kicked a field goal to complete the scoring.

Although the juniors were victorious, the senior men put on a show of their own. Dressed in the latest fashions, complete with makeup and enticing hair styles, the men showed the girls what real women should act and look like. Careful practice and precision went into many of the routines performed before those who were loyal enough to venture out on an otherwise inclement day and give up the family-room comfort of watching the Brown's game. To those of us who saw the show, whether from the sidelines, the stands, or on the field itself, it was one of those memories, wrought from Chagrin tradition, that will stay with us for a long time.

THE ROLL

Every year around Halloween time comes the legendary PUMPKIN ROLL. A time of joy and happiness experienced by the juniors and seniors. As everybody knows the students of Chagrin Falls High School, during all hours of the night, secure pumpkins from houses, farms, businesses, schools; we have even been known to get them from the police station. We did, however, make one grave mistake; we accidentally got our hand on the principal's pumpkins. This was not good, especially since somebody in his neighborhood got a description of the get-away-car and his license plates. On another occasion a giant 515 pound pumpkin was taken, the crime made the 11:00 news, and one of the perpetrators attempted to chainsaw the evidence before it was discovered. On yet another occasion, as students were unloading pumpkins from a car, one pumpkin was accidentally dropped, rolled down the driveway, into the street, and hit an oncoming police car. What bad luck!

Yet through all this misfortune we still had fun at the pumpkin roll. And to think that this whole thing was started many decades ago when a student with his station wagon full of pumpkins innocently drove to the top of Grove Hill. Once the vehicle had reached the top, the door flung open and the pumpkins came rolling and smashing down the hill. The road had to be closed until the city could clean it up because the road became so slippery to drive up. During the wait for the clean up crew, the local kids played in it. Ever since, the pumpkin roll has evolved to the point where thousands of pumpkins are gathered, and on one night each year, dozens of students slide, fall, roll, and get pushed down the hill for one fun-filled night that they will never forget.

"I never felt so alone in my whole life. And George over there, looking so...! I hate him. I wish I were dead. Papa! Papa!"

"Yes, Doc Gibbs lost his wife two-three years ago...about this time. And today's another pretty bad blow for him, too."

"-They get weaned away from earth-that's the way I put it, -weaned away."

"Only it seems to me that once in your life before you die you ought to see a country where they don't talk in English and don't even want to."

"So-ah-if you get stuck, George, you whistle to me; and I'll give you some hints."

"But, Julia! To have the organist of the church drink and drunk year after year. You know he was drunk tonight."

Our Town

(A letter to the editor of The Chagrin Valley Times by Victoria Zahka)

This past weekend, I had the pleasure of seeing the Chagrin Falls High School production of "Our Town" by Thornton Wilder. It was superb! As I listened to Mr. Wilder's play, set in 1901, I became lost in the words spoken by the actors through the characters they played. They were no longer the 15-, 16- and 17-year-olds I knew but became the mothers, fathers, sons and daughters experiencing the passages of life in the small towns of America. They pulled you into their lives, their dreams, hopes and sorrows as if you too were one of them.

The next time one is motivated to criticize the youth in Chagrin for all they do wrong, they should consider the students who performed in this play. The talent, commitment, energy and time these students and their director gave resulted in a professional and exciting production.

It also serves to illustrate that the students in Chagrin are not unlike the students in Thornton Wilder's play written so long ago. They dream, love, live and begin to become their "own persons" and all the risks that will bring.

Bravo!

A Ball To Remember

The semiformal of a life time-- the Winter Formal of 1994. What could be better? You and your friends all get asked to the dance by a girl; they pay; they set up a dinner before the dance and the plans afterward. What could be better? For all the other dances the women are treated like queens, but for this one glorious night of fun and dancing, the guys are finally treated like kings. The dance really is not that formal either. The guys wear a shirt and tie, and the women wear semiformal dresses. This year some students even decided to make it a costume dance. There was one guy dressed as a woman, another as Indiana Jones, someone even came dressed as a large blue monster! This kind of thing can happen when you have themeless dances. There was also a change in the music at the formal. For once, the dance committee hired two professional DJ's to spin the dials and play the tunes, rather than getting one of the students to control the music. Admittedly, they didn't always play the tunes we wanted, but overall they did a decent job. As the evening wore on, most of the students had somewhere else to go, usually a friends house where they could kick back and relax. For some of us this was our last high school Winter Formal and for most of us we were determined to make the most of it.

Stickin' Together

In every way, friends make our days twice as much fun. Whether we recall past experiences or create new ones, it is always evident that we count on our friends for everything. Friends believe in one another and help to pull one another along to achieve personal goals. We realize that friendship is not only sharing good times but sticking together through defeats, romances, fears, and disappointments. During these times we need our friends the most and learn to appreciate their tenacity and strength.

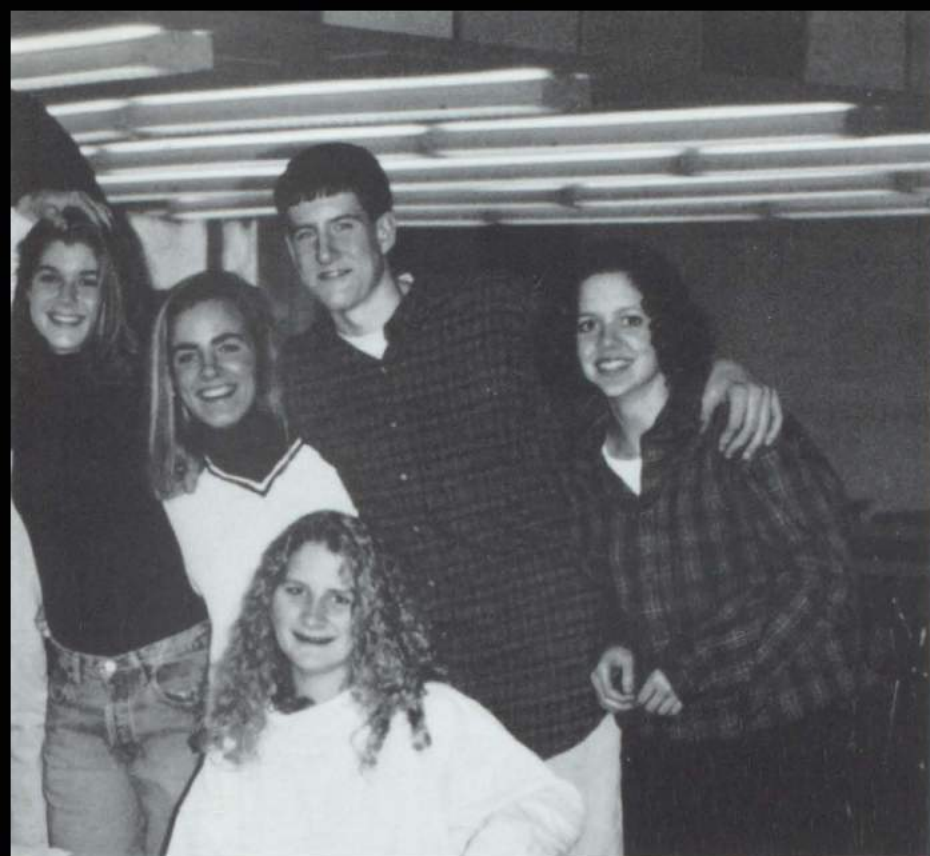

"My friends mean the world to me; I could not survive without them," said Amy Spresser. We count on our friends for advice on just about everything. Often we need help with an assignment or problem in class. Sometimes we need to discuss a situation at home, but often the subject is dating or other personal problems. No one understands this problem in just the same way as another teenager does.

"I knew I had one or two close friends who would help me when I needed help, support me when I needed support, and give me honest advice, whether I liked or disliked what she said," said Amanda Dallas.

Over the years we have all come to realize how important friendships really are.

Blood, Blood Everywhere!

On November 16, Chagrin Falls High School sponsored a bloodmobile from the Northern Ohio Blood Service. 65 students collected a total of 56 pints. These pints would have the potential of saving 168 lives. Lynn Shirk from Blood Services gave credit to our accomplishments, "Chagrin Falls High School can take great pride in being part of a lifesaving endeavor, and you can take great pride in being an instrumental part of saving many lives!"

Students were given blood giving appointment times throughout the day. As their appointment approached, student volunteers dressed in Superman and clown costumes would interrupt classes and take blood donors by wheelchair to the back gym. Several students who experienced the blood-giving process for the first time expressed their feeling afterwards. Megan McFadden claimed that "it was a wonderful feeling when they fished with the needle after the right vein." Travis Kruse confided that it "really sucked when my blood was rejected because I didn't have enough iron." A number of students fainted and took the rest of the day off.

Alien Attack

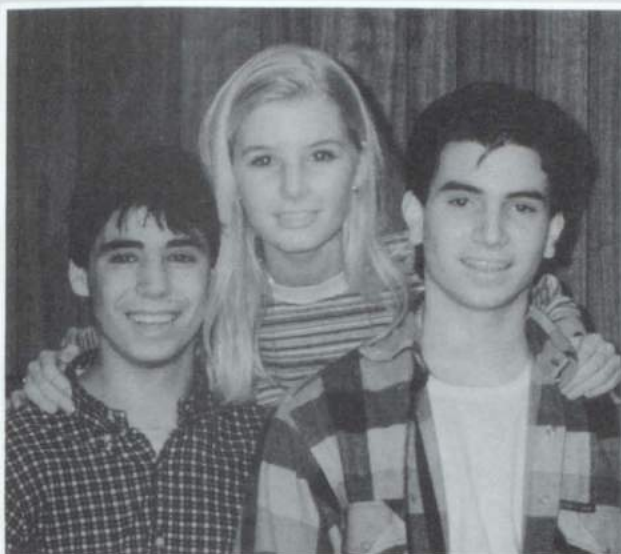

This year Chagrin Falls hosted three exchange students Evelina Asp (Sweden), Javier Tome (Spain) and Bernardo Recalde (Argentina).

The youngest student was Javier, 15. He arrived in America in August. His first impression was that people always drove everywhere and never walked. Javier thinks school is easier here because he went to a private school in Madrid. Javier speaks fluent English after taking it for only two years. Writing letters, reading and going out with friends are what he enjoys in his spare time. He loves Doritos.

Our other student from Europe was Evelina, 16, who also arrived in August. Her first impression was that people were so open and talkative. One big difference she noticed was the widespread student involvement in school activities. Evelina found it surprising that sixteen year olds were driving and many had a job. Her favorite word is "goose bumps." She would consider living in America later on in her life.

Bernardo likes America but he misses the school in his country, Argentina. Bernardo enjoyed being on the Tigers soccer team. In his spare time he likes rock climbing and writing letters. His absolute favorite thing is peanut butter and the comic strip, Calvin and Hobbes. Bernardo and the other students were all thrilled with the opportunity of spending a year in America.

HANGIN' AROUND TOWN

When the bell rings at 2:30 p.m. everyday, students are not always on their way home. Contrary to popular belief, students do more than just homework. The way Robin Lowe sees it "after school is a time to relax and hang out with my friends." The students who do go out, go to places like "town", friends houses and practices for various sports. Lindsey Simone says, "Town is a place that everyone just gathers to have something to do." At friends houses, kids usually watch T.V. and eat.

Fortunately, Chagrin is one of the schools that gets out earlier. This is because the majority of students participate in various sports. As Kory Haase puts it, "It seems like all I ever do anymore is practice and go to games." If you don't participate in a sport, there is always a game which you can go to in order to support Chagrin.

A lot of students have after-school jobs which they go to. For instance, some work at local restaurants and grocery stores. Kids see working as a way of earning extra money to spend in their free time. Frank O'Brien says, "My job means the world to me and it helps with my social skills." Megan McFadden says, "I enjoy getting my paycheck every other Friday. Also, even though I bus tables, its hard work, but the money is good."

Although students do go places, some believe that these "hangouts" are too expensive and that teens are discriminated against. For instance, the "No Loitering" signs in town, some believe are unfair. Emily Bultinck says, "It's not fair for those who do not have their licenses to be punished for walking around town." Chris Mobley thinks "There needs to be more under 18 dance clubs or something." Teenagers think this is not fair to them because they just want to get together and have fun.

Sports

In sports it's still A Winning Tradition

The Monday morning announcements crackled in the classrooms, as sleepy-eyed students tried to re-orient themselves for another week of academics. The varsity football team had lost their game and the pain of another defeat was just beginning to ease. Usually the announcements were given on TV, but due to technical difficulties this morning they were relegated to the old reliable P.A. "The golf team scored yet another victory over the weekend, continuing their domination. Tickets for the next tournament will be available at your nearest Ticketron locations in your area. ESPN will be carrying highlights this weekend. Don't miss out!" Nary a student blinked--not even a raised eyebrow--not even a puzzled expression. Golf coach Mr. Howell had set us up, and whooosh, it sailed right over our heads like a golf ball off the first tee.

Interestingly enough, a very effective point was made, even if few of us heard it. We are a small school which traditionally gaged our success in sports by the Big Two, football and basketball. We can look back to the early days of Chagrin, particularly the 60's and 70's and wonder in amazement at astounding won-loss records in a school that was then nearly twice the enrollment, and who loved to pound opposing teams into the turf year after year. Now, of course, it's the other way around. But we do not despair, for it is in other sports where we keep the tradition of winning alive. The golf, soccer, cross country teams, as well as the wrestlers, swimmers, and tennis players, have kept us in the hunt year after year. No, these aren't the teams and student athletes that draw thousands to watch them perform on a Friday night, but ask any one of them how they feel about their accomplishments, and they will tell you that they wouldn't trade anything for that sweet smell of success.

Starting out on another cross country meet against Chardon, the team finished with solid performances all season. Strength, stamina, and good training were keys to their success this year.

FOOTBALL

The Varsity Football Team encountered a frustrating and losing season. This team was by far a better team then the 0 - 10 record indicated. The year according to coach Ponikvar was, "Disappointed in the win/lose record, obviously, but I really enjoyed the season, because of the attitudes of the players and their enjoyment of the game." Although the Tigers were outweighed and out manned, they never gave up and played with enormous pride and intensity for themselves and Chagrin. As Jeff Largey put it, "It's a very disappointing season, but AMJ, Cam, and myself were real stand outs. I'll miss coach Piai's wise witticisms, and anecdotes that taught us, his pupils, so much about the hardships one shall experience throughout his life." The 1990 Chagrin Falls Football team was lead by Seniors Jeff Largey, Cam Ehrenbeit, Josh Schultz, Frank O'Brien, Brian Nelson, Bill Gates, Cody Linck, Andy Bergman, Tom Myers, Mark Iantosca, Tony Lupone, Moogie, and Travis Kruse. This elite team of Seniors had a crushing defense and a ruthless offense. But in the long run the Tigers were just outmanned. This 94' football team also had Junior stand outs such as Reed Cornell, Shaheed Bakr, David Bruce, and the infamous Max Hood, who was better known on the field as Black Death.

When asking ourselves what we thought of the season, we came to the conclusion that it may not have been the best year, but one of most enjoyable seasons we have ever played. Normally we would have dreaded summer practice. But this season we were enthralled to go. I think the team as a whole learned more about working together and never quitting in any game.

We look back on our fond memories of CFHS football. It all started freshman year, when senior Ryan Trautman put a jock on Cam's head, and Mike Voss beat up Josh. This was the year I, Josh Schultz, got my name AMJ. In our sophomore year we thought we had a chance to play varsity but we were sadly mistaken. This was the year when AMJ slept through a game, and it was also the year we almost quit in the game against Solon in freezing sub-zero weather. In our junior year we had the potential to have a good year, but the coaches made a fatal mistake by playing Will Vranich on defense instead of Cam Ehrenbeit. The season was over from the beginning. But our senior year was great! Thanks!

-Cam Ehrenbeit

-Josh Schultz.

This year junior captain Lauren Stern had a fantastic season. She was also the teams captain her freshman year.

Her numerous accomplishments helped the team to its best record in years. She got Second Team all CVC and Second Team all District honors. Lauren also received "The Most Valuable Player -94". Her strong personality and competitive determination helped the whole team through the season. She offered the team leadership, dedication and motivation.

Lauren has been playing volleyball for four years and participating on varsity for two years. She is looking forward to next season and believes that next year's team will be a pleasant surprise for everyone.

VOLLEYBALL

Mrs. Jody McNatt, head coach, prepared her team well for the season. She began by coaching her varsity team in an eight week Beaumont summer league. During the first week of August, the team started conditioning, which included, running two miles every day, running stairs, and focusing mostly on jumping drills. Two-a-day practices started in the second week in August.

Allison Linamen was the senior captain, and Lauren Stern was the junior captain. Lauren summed up the season by giving credit to the team and to Allison, "This year, our record improved greatly and our perseverance, discipline and talent were displayed on the court for every game. We hate to say good-bye to our only senior; her leadership, dedication and motivation kept the team together. Allison, we will miss you very much and wish you good luck in the future. Underclassmen, next year will be a great season"

Finally, Coach Jody McNatt related the hope of next years team: "We have a young team, only one senior. We will return with some great talent next year. The result of our intensity and hard work this year will definitely pay off in the years to come."

Evelina Asp

"...our perseverance, discipline and talent were displayed on the court for every game."

"We did great. We lost the big one, but there is always next year."

This year, the Chagrin Falls Varsity Soccer Team had its best year since the soccer team of 1986 when they went to the State Finals. Senior Co-captain Steven Frappier and Co-Caption Travis Kruse led the team to a disappointing second place finish in the C.V.C. and the Suburban Conference. The team won the District Finals 4-1 over rival U.S. and won a battle versus the weather and VASJ 4-0 in the Regional Semi-final game. They lost a heartbreaker in the last 26 seconds of the Regional Final game versus Bay. There were eight seniors returning from last year. The tigers strong defense was led by seniors Steve Frappier and Eric Smith. The mid-field was controlled by seniors Travis Kruse, Matt Jacobs, and Brian Hazen. The massive senior forward Tony Johnson, was one of the reasons that the tigers were so successful because of his scoring ability. The team's overall record for the season was 15-3-3. They scored 86 goals and only let 21 go by them. On the season Coach Mario Gerhardt said, "We did great, we lost the big one, but there is always next year." Many of the tigers received awards for their excellent play this year.

This year was very exciting with few disappointing games. With twelve returning letter winners, next year will be another exciting soccer season. GOOD LUCK!!!

BOYS SOCCER

Four, four year letter-winning players gave Chagrin four years of great soccer. These four players are Stephen Frappier, Brian Hazen, Matt Jacobs, and Travis Kruse. They've been around a long time and have seen just about everything that high school soccer has to offer. From their first days of practice in their freshman year, to the last game of their soccer career as seniors, they have given Chagrin High School much to remember.

To begin with, it is unheard of to have four good freshman make a varsity team, but even more bizarre was to have these four have an instant impact on the team.

These four seniors have seen more victories and fewer losses than any other four soccer players in Chagrin. Their overall record is 50-13-8, scoring a total of 249 goals, while letting in just 93.

Bottom Right: Matt Jacobs coordinates Chagrin's offensive attack by sending the ball across the field to create another goal scoring opportunity.

Junior sweeper Christine Knirsch had an exceptional season. She was the quarterback of the defense and helped keep the team focused during our 14-4 season-- 14 of those wins being shut outs.

She received many awards including, first team Independent League, first team East Side All Star Team, second team All Greater Cleveland Team, and second team News Herald All-Star Team. With her lightning speed and quick moves Christine saved many games for us. There was nobody we saw this season on any of the other teams that could out run her. She was what lead our team to many victories including many shut outs.

Playing the sweeper position was new for Christine since she started as a stopper during her sophomore year, a position where she also showed much speed and skill. This year though, the team needed her talents at sweeper, which emphasized her quickness even more.

Christine has also participated in basketball, and track. She has been playing sports ever since she can remember. Christine hopes to play soccer and track in college. Good Luck Christine!

GIRLS SOCCER

This years girls varsity soccer team because of its youth was underestimated by many teams and coaches. This was due to the loss of many talented seniors. Many positions begged to be filled and the team needed people to step up and display their willingness to fill these spots. Some of these spots were filled by five starting freshmen including, Katie Warnke, Katie Carson, Eleina Thomas, Trisha Kruse, and Astrid Senturia. The team also depended on Anne and Sarah Stephenson to step up when their hustle was needed. Starting sophomores were Jenny Lankford and Jenny Freshmen, who were both starters as freshmen, and who were also our number one and number two leading scorers. Trish Kruse played right behind them as our third leading scorer. Meghan Zenker, also a sophomore, showed her defensive talents when put in the game. Juniors Kory Haase and Daria Wysynski, played right and left wing. Christine Knirsch also a junior starter, had been on varsity as a freshman and this year she was the glue of the defense as sweeper. And of course you can not forget the seniors, of which there were only two, Annie Lovell and Mindi Sanders. Annie played right or left fullback depending on the game and Mindi was also a fullback. They will both be missed. The Varsity Girls Soccer Team ended up having an exceptional season with many teams surprised with what this young team achieved.

The golf team enjoyed another record breaking year setting three new records. . .

It was not a surprise to anyone, that once again the Tiger's golf team had another record breaking season. Although they did not qualify for play at State, they had a tremendous season. Actually the golf team enjoyed another record breaking year setting three new records, in most regular season wins (21 wins), highest team score (141 strokes), and the team average (161.7 strokes). Although the golf team competed as individuals, their work together enabled them to enjoy a very successful season. They posted an outstanding record and placed second in the C.V.C. They then went on to place fourth at Sectionals and placed at Districts. Leading the golf team this year were juniors Price Varty and Rob Williams, and freshman Josh Bacher. Josh tied the record of strokes per nine holes with a 33 vs. Wickliffe. Receiving honors in the Chagrin Valley Conference were Josh Bacher, First Team; Price Varty, Second Team; and David Grano and Rob Williams, Honorable Mention. Members of the Varsity Golf team were lone senior Scott Lankford; juniors Jamie Davidson, David Grano, Andy Male, Scott Sandmann, Price Varty, and Rob Williams; and freshman Josh Bacher and Chris Osolin.

GOLF

Scott Lankford has been dedicated to the golf team for all four years of his high school career. As team captain this year, he led the tigers to another successful season. "Golf has taught me a lot about life, each shot is different just like each day of my life," says Scott on his golf career. Throughout his golfing career he has helped the tigers place third in '92; and placed fourth in '93 at the State tournaments in Columbus.

This year he was the only senior on the team. Despite his efforts, he along with the rest of the team were unable to represent Chagrin at the State Tournament this year. Scott hopes that next year the team will make it to state.

Senior. Heather Kipp was an excellent asset to the girls Varsity Tennis Team. She has participated in the sport for three years during high school, being on Varsity for the last two.

Heather and her partner Julie Herron, the team's first doubles players had an excellent season. Their overall record was 11-3. They placed fourth in sectionals, and were also district qualifiers. Heather's personal record was 14-5. She was featured in an article in The News-Herald, describing her achievement in sectionals. "It was a fun and challenging experience," says Heather.

Heather finished her high school tennis career with a strong and exciting season.

TENNIS

The girls Varsity Tennis team had one of the most successful seasons ever. Their record was 15 wins and 5 losses. They were 4th and 3rd in the CVC, and they destroyed the NEOTEA league 8 to 0. They won that title and received a plaque for all of their hard work. The first doubles team, consisting of Heather Kipp and Julie Herron, advanced themselves through sectionals, finishing as the number four seeded team, and advanced to the first round of districts.

The co-captains for this year were Meredith Neidhardt and Kate Peterson. They both worked very hard and it is shown through this year's record. The six other members of this wonderful team are Megan Bell, Julie Herron, Heather Kipp, Hallie Kuhr, Sarah Munson, and Brooke Roeper. Two girls that should really be commended for their flexibility this year are Hallie Kuhr and Sarah Munson. They filled in wherever they were needed and were a strong foundation for the team. Brooke Roeper and Megan Bell were the two frosh on the team and surprised everyone by having tremendous seasons. At first and second singles, they came out with records of 15-5 and 17-3.

This year could be called the rebuilding year for Girls Varsity Tennis. With a solid nucleus of young players the future looks very bright, indeed.

Cross-country is not a sport for wimps!

Cross-country has repeatedly been given a bad rap as a sport for wimps. Let me tell you something. Cross-country is not a sport for wimps! With individual practice having begun way back in June of 1994, by the time the season ended these guys had been running almost every day for five months. A daily practice during the season usually consisted of a short stretching period, then a run of anywhere from one to nine miles and finally a short cool down jog. The boys team placed well in the CVC meet but their finish did not reflect their dual meet record in the Chagrin Valley Conference. Coach Kirk commenting on the meet said, "Our runners placed respectfully despite the injury to one of our stronger runners and also the lack of upperclass experience on the team." The boys placed very well in Districts while finishing third place but failed to qualify for State with a tenth place finish at Regionals. The 1994 Boys Cross Country team included: Paul Breitzmann, Brian Cross, Paul Elliott, Chris Ferrone, Ryan Hoffman, Trevor Hublin, Andy Kastner, Glen Kirsch, Eric Laderer, Geoff Lockert, Ian Martz, Larry Miller, Charlie Pugh, Mike Striewing and Adam Wendling. Good luck in 1995!!

CROSS COUNTRY

The Girls' Cross Country team had yet another successful and exciting season. The team began their season back in June of 1994 with individual preseason training. The girls ran throughout the summer in order to be in prime condition for the grueling season practices which began in mid-August. Practices usually consisted of a session of stretching followed by a long run and then a short cool down jog. This schedule became routine for the girls by the time the dual meets and invationals began.

The hard work put forth in the preseason paid off for the girls by their first invitational when they finished second out of a field of sixteen. Casey Abley summed up a good outing with this to say, "Our team's hard work and determination was shown in this race and if we continue to work hard throughout the season, we should place well in the state meets." The girls did continue to be dedicated to their running and had great success during the season. They finished first in the CVC meet and first in Districts. Though the team did not qualify for the state championship meet with a sixth place finish at Regionals, Cortney DeGross qualified for state for the fourth consecutive year. She did not finish high as was expected but still finished respectively. The team's members were: Casey Abley, Anne Cordek, Cortney DeGross, Erin Flynn, Hillary Gilway, Jessica Gilway, Sarah Hauser, Jill Johnson and Megan Rowland.

"Cortney DeGross qualified for State for the fourth consecutive year."

BOYS BASKETBALL

The boys varsity basketball team had another exciting year under Co-captain's Mark Iantosca and Erik Rozsa. The team ended the year with a 18-0 state championship season. Only kidding! The team ended the season at a meek 9 wins and 11 losses, losing most of the games by less than five points with all games going down to the wire. The starting five players consisted of center Tyler Tervo, power forward Erik Rozsa, large mass forward Travis Kruse, off-guard Brian Somersshield, and point guard Mark Iantosca. Other members of the team consisted of seniors "Thunder" Dan Carlton, Scott Lankford, and Jim "Grit" Reinart, and juniors Josh Armbruster, Matt Gile, Geoff Lockert, and Dave Grano. The seniors took over this year with their leadership ability and showed everyone how it should be done. Mark Iantosca, Travis Kruse, and Erik Rozsa, the three experienced varsity members, used their knowledge to lead the team to victory. With newcomer Jim "Grit" Reinart, there was more dirty play seen in practice every day. In league play the Tigers finished with 5 wins and 9 losses. However, the season was more exciting than it may seem from the record. The seniors won their last home game of their careers over Brooklyn by 30 points. In the tournament draw, the team lost their final game to Painesville Harvey, ending a year that saw an improved Chagrin team maintain respectability around the league.

Since their sophomore year, they have been contributing to the varsity basketball teams. Mark Iantosca and Erik Rozsa have been leaders both on and off the court.

Mark Iantosca was a threat from anywhere on the court. He was able to hit a long range three and then go down in the key and post his man up. Mark led the team in assists and was a very unselfish player. Mark's comment on his four years of basketball is, "Showtime Baby!!!"

Erik Rozsa was an automatic two when he got the ball in his hands, and could hit from anywhere inside the three point line. His specialty was his patented up and under slam dunk.

Both players were tremendously instrumental in Chagrin's success this year, and their talent will be missed.

This season the Lady Tigers were led by senior captain, Casey Abley, known by her teammates as "Captain Casey." She was a great leader for the team, and her qualities were both helpful on and off the court. She was a captain that tied the team together. She was always there to talk to if there was something that was bothering someone on the team. She never would get overly upset, and she always would try to lift the teams spirits or the team would try and lift hers. That's how it was; somehow everybody seemed to get along and help support each other.

Casey did a great job all season starting for the tigers at guard. She was their leading three point shooter. The whole team wishes Casey luck at college!

GIRLS BASKETBALL

This year the girl's basketball team was definitely young especially when looking at the starting five. The team was lead by only one senior, Casey Abley, who was the team captain. The other four starting players were freshman Trisha Kruse, and sophomore Kelly Haase, and junior Meghan Anderson. Junior Kory Haase got injured half way through the season and Abbey Abley, Christy Svette, and Katie Carson stepped up to fill out the forward position. The team also had solid assistance from the bench. Sophomores Natalie Kormos, Julie Herron, and juniors, Daria Wysynski, Christine Knirsch, Tiffany Thomas, Christin Hutchison, and Sara Svette, helped keep the team competitive throughout the season.

The Lady Tiger's season went through many ups and downs, but whenever they were in a rut they got out of it. This year the team ended with a very successful season placing third in the conference, with a regular season record of 11-8. This was Chagrin's best showing since Coach Phillips took over the team.

The season was full of memories for the girls and will probably be one of the few seasons fans will ever see one senior on the court. Casey Abley will be greatly missed next year and the team wishes her luck in the future. When asked what she remembers about the season she said, "The season went so well because everybody got along and supported each other."

"...as the season progressed, we were able to realize our CVC goals with our progress through the tournament."

"We have capable fire power this year, but injuries and illnesses devastated our win/loss record. We are a very good team, but injuries and illnesses kept us from being a great team."

Coach Wem

Unlike last year, this years wrestling squad was left with the unbelievable task of rebuilding itself. Having lost four key seniors, two of whom made it to state, the team was being hard pressed to match the success of the past year. However, we had the return of six Seniors, Eric Smith, Andy Bergman, Cody Linck, Josh Schultz, Mike Shaddow, Cam Ehrenbeit and many experienced juniors such as Matt Schron, Andrew Stephenson, Shaheed Bakr, Jeff Grubich, and sophomore standouts such as Jeremy Murray, and B.J. Morrison. Currently Seniors Mike Shaddow, Josh Schultz and Cam Ehrenbeit along with Juniors Matt Schron, and Shaheed Bakr are ranked among the top area wrestlers in their weight class. The Tiger Matmen placed third in the Brecksville Tournament, took first at the Newbury Quad, and second at the Pymatuming Valley Tournament. Our losses were to highly placed teams such as Kenston, Chardon, Aurora, Solon, Twinsburg, and a loss to West Geauga due to sickness which took many of the varsity wrestlers out. Many matmen did advance from districts to sectionals. These wrestlers distinguished themselves at the sectional tournament: Josh Schultz, Shaheed Bakr, Matt Schron, Cody Linck, Dave Roberts, and Mike Shaddow.

Mike Shadow, a four year letter man, was a driving force behind this years wrestling team. Throughout his four years as a varsity wrestler Mike has grown tremendously. He is a very dedicated member of the team, he is often chosen by coach Don Wem to demonstrate new moves. By doing so he is truly able to help the other members of the team. Mike is no doubt a strong asset to the team. He has been able to pin his opponents on most occasions. Mike has a win-lose record of 20 and 3. Mike, on several occasions has been able to pin his opponent when that individual is from a top ranked team such as Kenston, Aurora, and Solon. Mike won third place at Brecksville Tournament, first in the P.V. Tournament, and first in the Newbury Quad. The last three years Mike has proudly represented Chagrin at Sectionals and Districts. Mike says, "I will definitely go down to Dayton and kick butt." Coach Wem said, "no one is more dedicated or works harder than Mike." Over the last four years he has grown tremendously. He works very hard and deserves all the recognition he receives.

A round of applause goes out to the first boy's swim team captain in Chagrin Fall's history-Jamie Rockwell. It may have taken Jamie a few years to gather a team together, but this man is no stranger to the water. Jamie has been swimming since he was eight years old. He started practicing with the Chagrin girls swim team in the winter during his freshmen year. Jamie can't give a real reason for wanting to start a team, he just thought it would be fun. Starting the team though was no easy task. First he had sign ups. Thirteen guys signed up, nine guys showed up, but only five strong survivors stuck with Jamie. Because the team was so small scheduling meets was a problem, but he is very enthusiastic about next year. (and he hopes the wimps who dropped out will reconsider their mistake and join this bunch of future winners!)

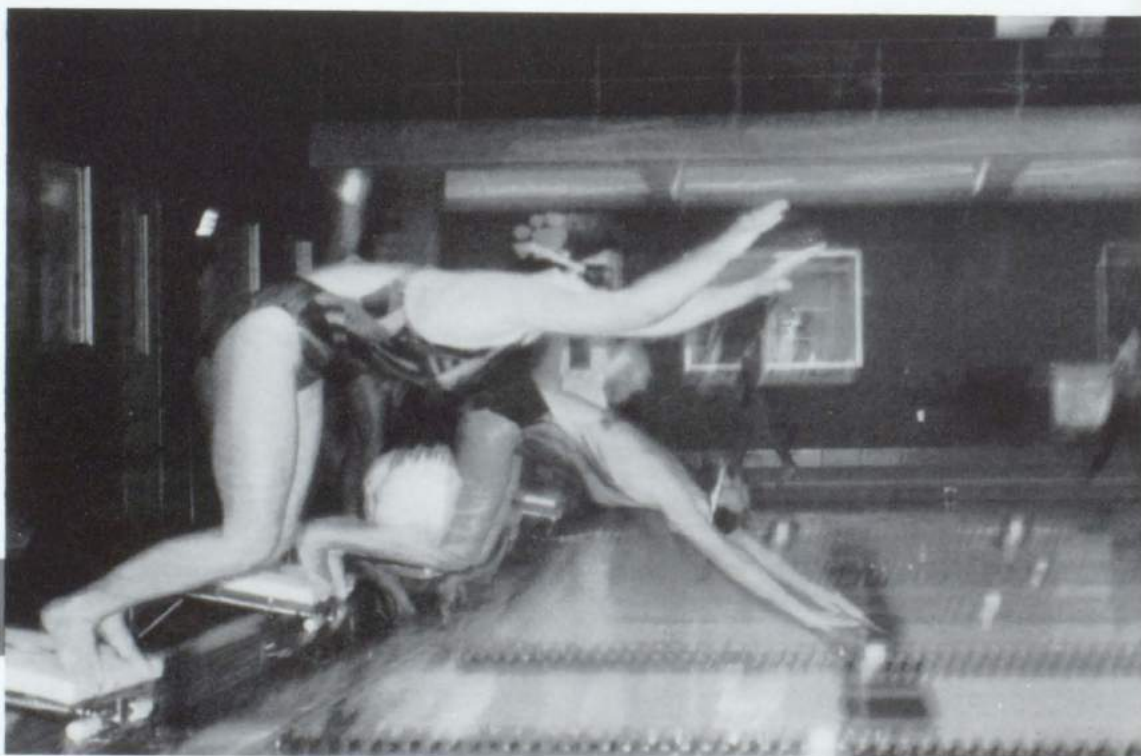

Congratulations
Jamie for a job well done!

Kate Peterson

SWIMMING

Although not a very publicly acclaimed sport, the Tiger's swimming team was a blazing reality. Co-Captains Kathleen Holtz and Allyson Klebes led the girls to a nine and five team record. Although this team may be young they appear to be strong, giving each opposing team their fair share of intense competition. And once again the girls highlighted their season with a superb victory over their biggest rival, Kenston.

But the girls weren't the only sharks in the pool this year. With the help of junior Jamie Rockwell, a boys swim team was instigated. The boys team consists of Captain Jamie Rockwell, Andy Warnke, Andrew Munson, as well as Paul Elliot and Brian McGill, both of whom are Freshman. Although their team may be small they appeared to have made quite a splash with a record three wins and four loses.

So this year the girls shared in co-ed car pools to the Gilmour Academy pool every day for those wonderful two hour "hell practices" with their coach Wally Lukas and new assistant coach, Wilson Porter who said, "The swim team this year has been very successful and spirited. Everyone has worked really hard."

And all of that hard work seemed to pay off as the girls placed 13th overall at the 1995 swimming districts at Cleveland State University. Kathleen Holtz also made out like a bandit this season as she won a spot at the swimming state tournament for her 100 Butterfly- a major accomplishment for this star athlete and her team. A round of applause goes out for Kathleen and the girls and boys swim teams for a super season!

"The girl's weren't the only sharks in the pool this year"

"The team was dedicated and willing to work very hard."

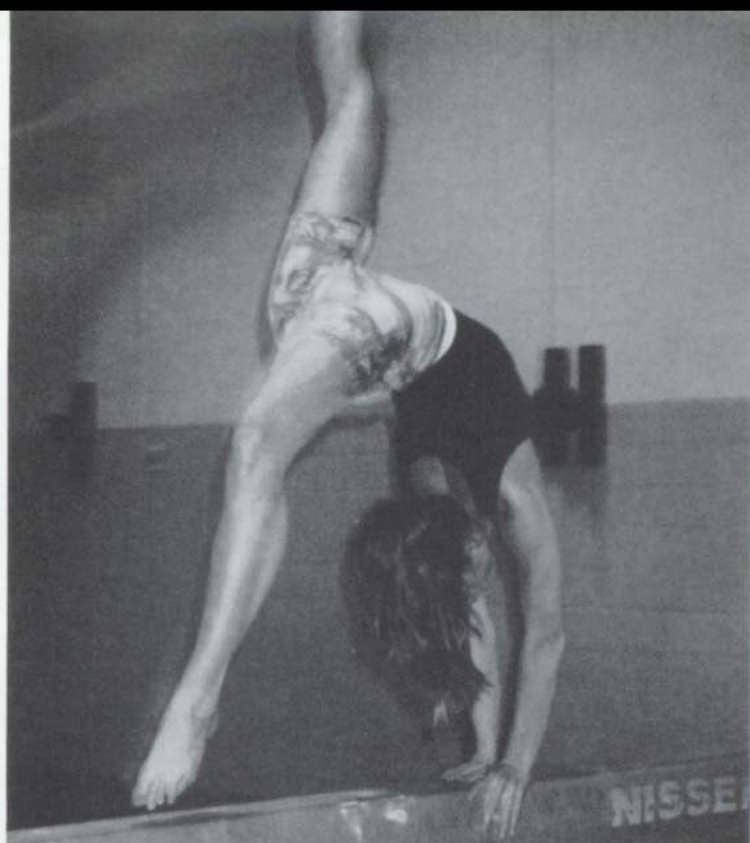

The girls Gymnastics team this year was strong in spirit, but few in number. The team consisted of seniors Sarah Quick and Becky Prestel, juniors Dana Leary, Sarah Cooper, and Christy Carlson, sophomore Shea Scanlon, and freshman Jill Tucker. Coach Bob Vencl, assistant coach Jacquie Byrd, and co-captains Sarah Quick and Sarah Cooper did a great job keeping the team focused.

Although they finished the season with a 1-12 record, the team was dedicated and willing to work very hard. Many of the members even tried new events just to keep the team going. Among some of these people are Christy Carlson, Dana Leary, and until injured, Danielle Masseria. The team also had a few other injuries this season, but despite these, they persevered.

All the girls this season were very crucial to the team. One in particular, Jill Tucker, surprised all of us with her outstanding ability which took her to districts. With the majority of the girls returning next year, good things are in store for this team in years to come.

Jill Warren

Dana Leary, a junior, has been a member of the gymnastics team since her freshman year. Although she has only been on the team for three years, her extensive training began long ago. At the age of five, Dana began taking lessons from Mr. Phend. She continued her lessons from him and three years later she qualified for the Preteam, an elite group of young and talented gymnasts. At this point she began competing for a YMCA team with kids in her own age group. She won many awards for her skills, but eventually quit the YMCA team, to join the high school team.

Since she has been in high school, she narrowed her events down to primarily the beam. She has competed on the vault a few times, but decided it was best for her to improve her beam skills. "I've done my best in gymnastics this year, but the best time I had was my freshman year because it was a new experience being a part of a great high school team and I did really well," says Dana. Overall Dana has had a great career in gymnastics.

These three cheerleaders, Charlotte Blair, Betsy Sutliff, and Lindsay See have been cheering since the Middle School days with Ms. Davenport. Every year they have cheered in the snow and rain during the football season, or in the heat of the gym during basketball season.

These girls especially loved to stay out late the night before the Homecoming game. All of the Senior football players wake up ready to leave for school and these women vandalized their homes. The girls just meant to decorate the houses, but went a little nutty and used all the shaving cream on our homes. When the senior players walked outside their homes, what a slippery surprise greeted them!

These girls also had to experience cheerleading camp, which really turned into a kind of cheerleading hell camp. But they did get a chance to practice old cheers and learn and refine new ones and had a lot of fun. Also, during the summer the girls would make all of the banners for every football game and all of the basketball games.

Everyone on the football team and basketball team are very grateful for these women and their thoughtful support and dedication throughout the years. Thanks!

I Love You Girls!

CHEERLEADING

One of the lesser known facts about Chagrin Falls High School is that the cheerleaders actually do something. They are continually criticized as being a group of girls who do essentially nothing but stand and scream. Well, I can almost guarantee that each August the cheerleaders are put through one of the most hellish weeks of their lives that anyone could ever imagine. What are the two words that send chills through my spine at their mere mention?...CHEERLEADING CAMP. Those four days that I, as a cheerleader, had to endure, will live with me for the rest of my life, no matter how hard I try to forget them.

Camp began with what at first glance appeared to be a harmless gathering-- the opening pep rally, but in actuality was our introduction to the 500 or so screaming girls with whom we would spend every waking moment. There seemed to be a cheer for everything with little to cheer about. By the end of the week, capital punishment would have seemed to have been a pleasant alternative to the cruel and unusual punishment we, as cheerleaders, were forced to endure.

To make this year's camp experience especially delightful, we were blessed with the worst weather imaginable. The week began as unbearably hot and muggy. It then proceeded to rain, sending 500 hot, sticky, sweaty girls into the Baldwin Wallace gym, where we continued our ritual pulling of muscles and endless jumping, all with a smile, of course. All the while, it continued to rain, and we were almost stranded there. Our only piece of luck the entire week was that after trying several alternate routes, we finally found a road that was not entirely covered with standing water, and made it safely back home. So, the next time you find yourself ready to ridicule cheerleaders as participating in a cushy sport, remember this story and be glad that you don't have to put up with the same torture we have to endure.

People

We can't escape our Class Niche

"What are you?" Ask that question of a stranger outside of a school's campus, and the person would probably stare blankly at you, wondering whether you are trying to open some philosophical dialogue or whether you are just real strange. Ask the same question in a high school, and you get a predictable response: "senior", "junior", "sophomore", or "freshman". This is probably for a very good reason. We put a high value on identifying ourselves by our grade level, and by those around us who are of the same age. We have that shared commonality of experience on each level of schooling. We came into high school together, and we will surely leave together. We also see that with each level of schooling new experiences, demands, course work, teachers, responsibilities, obligations, requirements, attitudes, and even class traditions must be fulfilled if we are to move on to the next level. If we could catalogue our common experiences it might look something like this:

Juniors--PSAT's, colleges, counselors, chemistry, physics, trig, Transcendentalism, AP History, commons, concessions, fund raising, dating, job hunting, independence, powder puff, Junior-Senior Prom.

When this years freshmen walked into the halls of Chagrin Falls High School, for the first time, many different questions went through their minds. "Will I be hazed?", "Will I have to sing to a senior?", "Will I get lost?", "Will I get a swirlley?". All of these questions were answered very quickly for most, and most of them found out that being a freshman really was not all that bad.

Being a freshman is a time to gain freedom along with new friends, and experiences. You start to put behind those trivial problems you had in middle school, and start facing new challenges you will overcome in high school. Some of the memories of your first year in high school are the ones that you will hold on to for the rest of your life. For most freshmen their first big change for the better is the "social life" in high school. Homecoming is usually one of the biggest events that is most looked forward to. And let's not forget the Winter Formal Dance, football games, basketball games, varsity sports, and dating upperclassmen.

Overall, when looking back on that first year of high school, most freshmen would tell you it was one of the best years of their high school careers.

Sophomore Thoughts on Another School Year

"Ah yes, sophomore year has finally arrived. Freshman year is over, and last year's seniors are a thing of the past. This year's seniors only, for the most part, pick on the freshman. There are no more degrading rituals or hazing to put up with, and we are actually free to walk the halls with out having to look over our shoulders. This is definitely going to be a good year. Not only do we have more freedom, but many of us will get our license and much more responsibility. We are given longer curfews and our friends have been narrowed down to a select group. Now all we have to worry about is keeping the grades so that next year we may actually surpass the Ennemoser wall on periods other than 5th, 6th, and 7th. Only one more step till we are upperclassmen. Oh, yea, life is good, we have freedom, responsibility, friends, and at last the anticipation of becoming upperclassmen. Life is definitely good!

J·U·N·I·O·R·S

Our Junior year is probably one of the most important years of our high school career. We are finally upperclassmen, and along with that comes many new experiences. The first one would have to be commons. Finally, we are out of those dreaded study halls- we can actually eat and talk while we work. Then comes Powder Puff, the Junior girls versus the Senior women. This is our chance to show those guys what we women can really do. Then comes the Pumpkin Roll. This time honored tradition can only be experienced by the upperclassmen, something that we have been waiting for for three years. Many of us have been preparing for this event for some time now- pumpkining every weekend, and constantly thinking about it. Some of us can not wait for that incredible moment of sliding down Grove Hill, and running to get out of the way when you reach the bottom. After the pumpkin roll comes prom. Prom is probably one of the really special times in our lives, and now that we are upperclassmen, we can enjoy it even more.

Our junior year is the last year that we can have fun. We do not need to worry about applying to college, nor the fears of being underclassmen. This year we can enjoy high school, without the worries that we had the other years of high school. Overall, our junior year is one that we can look back on and remember as one of the best.

SENIORS

Dr. Seuss Explains It All

With a little help from our friends and a lot of love, we--the Class of 1995-- have learned and accomplished so much and in so many ways. We've always been free to lead our lives the way we choose, both to our detriment and to our advantage. With these freedoms we sometimes wandered off course, but our friends, parents and teachers were always there to point us in the right direction.

From our days of coloring in kindergarten to the time consuming task of filling out college applications, we've played our roles like professional actors on the stage that life had prepared for us. It was almost as if each step was a kind of brief performance where we would take center-stage, perform our bit, and then move on. We were told in elementary school how this educational experience was preparation for the "big time"---the middle school. When we finally made it to the middle school we were told that this was to get us ready for the really "big time"---the high school. Then with each step of our high school experience we struggled a little, learned a lot, laughed and even cried. But bit by bit with each new unique and exciting experience we GREW. And when we finally made it and the Class of 1995 became Seniors, we realized that with this new title came bigger responsibilities. We were now the ones the freshmen looked at as being "mature" and "responsible". We were placed in charge of such events as homecoming, the pumpkin roll, powder puff, and senior projects. Our stage was set, and we knew we could make this the performance of our lives. We reached high and were determined to accomplish our new goals. And with our determination we found more than just pride and satisfaction, but also a sense of unity as our class pulled together. As our Senior year wound down, we began to realize that all of this was just another stage preparing us for the next one. We are now ready for the jumping off point for the world of college and work.

Through our years together, we have all grown to be better, stronger, and more knowledgeable people. Our school, our community, and our friendships, have all played their parts in each successive stage of our development. And now we are hopeful that we can successfully embark upon our greatest performance of all. I think Dr. Seuss put it best, "I'm so glad we had this time together just to laugh and sing a song, seems like we just got started. And then before you know it comes the time to say 'so long'."

Without The Eese It's Just Ch

It's useless for me now to try to imagine what high school memories will adhere to me best many years from now. Silly anecdotes don't seem to come to mind when I try to remember them, though I know that they exist in hordes. High school is a place to experience four more years of state-required education with a decision attached concerning higher education. That's what it is. Giving such an institution more credit than that could be dangerous-it adds just another unnecessary bit of power to the stagnant walls that surround us (oh right, did I mention that I am a member of "Generation X"). Keeping all of this in mind, I am going to tell you about cheese and its relationship to my high school experience. I'm not talking about stuff that is cheezy, I am just speaking of cheese, the dairy product. It is my favorite aspect of school lunch, a ritual in which everyone at school participates in some way, shape, or form. First off, there is nothing pleasant to eat that does not incorporate cheese in some way. Wait, there's Jell-o, but I'm pretty sure that it has cheese in it anyway. To name a few exceptional lunch products, I have to mention the tried and true taco, the faithful cheeseburger, and the slightly ambiguous but mucho tasty fiestado. Of great significance to my piece here is the Steak-umm and, in particular, the liquid cheese sauce used to smother it. The culmination of my lunch-time cheese eating occurred just a few weeks ago. It was a Steak-umm day, but cheeseburgers were on back-up. As part of the daily dollar-eighty-five platter I got two of those all beef patties and then, on top of the squares of American cheese, the noble lunch lady, upon my request, poured Steak-umm cheese sauce. Stop. What else could I do? I'll tell you.

I also requested (this is still within the confines of $1.85) a separate bowl of the hot cheese for my fries. All this, milk, and fruit drink too! To die now would be to have lived enough.

Cheese is worthy of praise. Cheese has never killed and cheese has never scorned. Cheese does not judge. When I neglect cheese, it molds by my side, faithful to the end. Cheese is versatile, but retains its identity when mixed with confusing oils and sauces all around. You have your role models and I'll have mine.

"Be My Baby"

From the moment the day started I knew this was going to be a great day. Spring time was here and better yet the school day was shortened for an assembly that was to occur at the end of the day. I was just in a really good mood. So I happily proceeded through my twenty-three minute classes just waiting for the assembly at the end of the day, knowing that after that I could go home and enjoy the warmer weather.

Having not paid attention to what the assembly was, I ignorantly proceeded to the assembly with my home room and sat down with friends. It turned out that it was a women's acappella singing group from Colgate University. It also turned out that they were pretty good. They sang mainly golden oldies from the fifties and sixties but it was much more enjoyable than the usual assembly that we would have. Then it happened.

One of the girls in the group asked all of the males in the crowd to stand up. Then she asked everyone who was not wearing plaid to sit down. Well about two dozen people were left standing including me because I happened to be wearing a plaid shirt that day. Then this girl said, "Hey you, with the red plaid shirt on." At the same time she was saying this she was pointing at me, though I seemed to believe that in no way could she be pointing at me. But she was. She called me down on to the gym floor and I was told to stand in the middle of a semi-circle formed by this singing group. They then proceeded to serenade me with the classic love song "Be My Baby", while hugging and clawing all over me. Perhaps privately this would have been quite a bit of fun, but being with 450 students, teachers and faculty was not my idea of a good time. I was so embarrassed that I did not know what to do. Eventually it hit me just to play the part and have a good time. So I did just that. But even now, every time I see the video tape of the event, I get a butterfly feeling in my stomach and I become just the slightest bit embarrassed about what occurred. Wow, what a way to find out what the assembly was about, and talk about embarrassment-- I believe I defined the word that day.

Right: Casually sitting on the comfortable chain, Cam Ehrenbeit, Mindi Sanders, Butt, Casey Abley and Travis Kruse show us the joys of being Seniors.

Far Right: When they said that his Senior year would be difficult, Ryan Sears never thought it would come to this, literally being swamped with books.

Wrong Place, Wrong Time, Wrong House.

As a student of Chagrin Falls, the pumpkining capital of the world, how could I choose to write of anything else? Many of my fondest memories come from this "sport", which is perhaps the most important and definitely the most fun activity of the fall. Nothing compares to the feeling of running back from a well lit porch with a huge pumpkin cradled in your arms, jumping into a car, and taking off.

With pumpkining comes many perils, however, and I have experienced some of these. But there was one instance in early October that outshines almost any pumpkining story you will ever hear- one that definitely left me, and the other people I was with, helpless victims of circumstances.

It was a Saturday night, and I left the soccer game with the intention of going pumkining. I drove, because no one else wanted to. Two other juveniles, as we are referred to, came with me, and we headed straight for Solon. Liberty Hill, with its endless roads and infinite number of houses, was our destination. There were pumpkins on a lot of the porches, and we started grabbing them right away. We left with a lot of good-sized pumpkins and almost no trouble until we arrived at school on Monday.

Someone came up to me and reported that the school had my license plate number and a description of my car from the Solon Police. Immediately I started to conjure up lies in order to get out of this unfortunate little predicament.

But then something else was revealed to me that changed the whole thing- Mr. Axner's two pumpkins had been stolen, and guess where he live? Yes! Liberty Hill!

After school I saw him pointing to my car, asking people if it was mine. I came to school the next day and discovered that he was hunting for me.

It was obvious that they knew it was me, so it would have been useless to lie. But how was I supposed to know whose pumpkins we were stealing? I had no clue that he lived there so I could not have deliberately set out to hit his house.

Anyway, much to the advice of my fellow juveniles, I set out to make a formal apology. Much to my relief, he gratefully accepted, and thus the epic saga came to a close.

I guess this story might lean towards a moral but what could it be? Pumpkin all you want, because it is an incredibly fun tradition that is unique to Chagrin, and deserves to stay intact, and it will provide good stories to tell your grandkids. Just stay away from Liberty Hill!

-Bob Padavick

Finale

Just ask the Class of 1995, they know what fun is. They also knew how to have fun in high school. In fact, if it was not an untrue statement, everything about high school was fun to them. I, being a member of the Class of 1995, would like to take you, the reader, on a little journey through some of the more pleasant events that occurred during our four brief, but influential years here at Chagrin Falls High School.

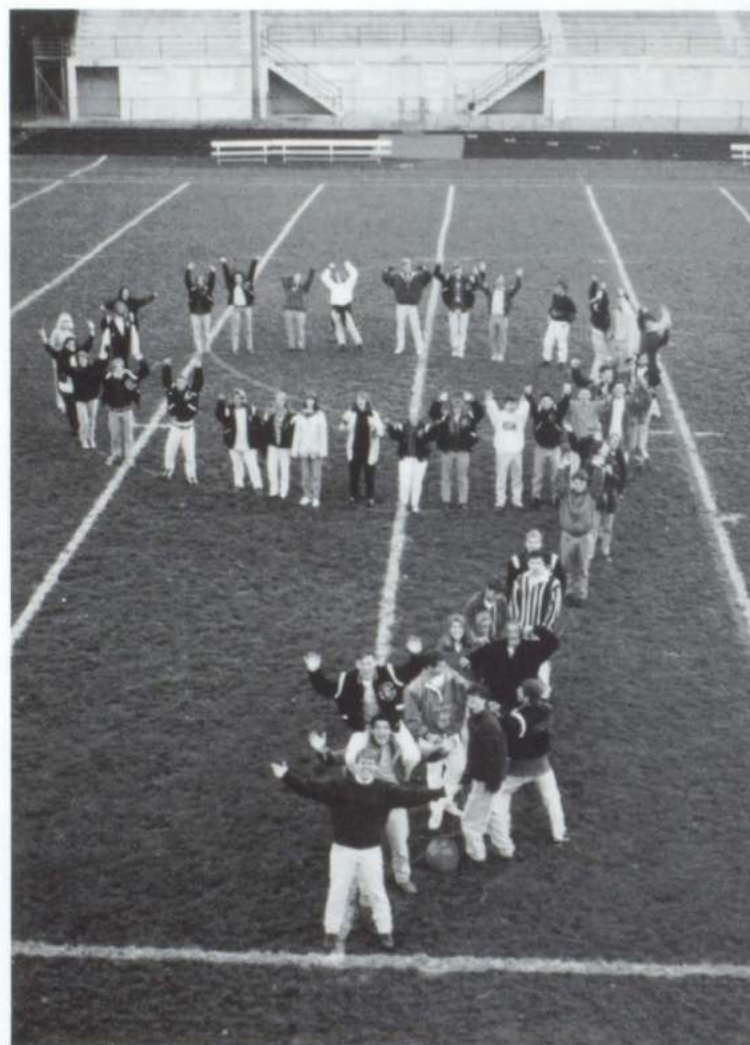

What better place to start than freshmen year? When we stepped through these doors for the first time I knew all of our lives would change forever. For some of us sooner than later. Senior guys were dating freshmen girls and all the freshmen boys could do was stand around jealous and become master debaters on what to do about it. Yet, we the Men of the Class of 1995 knew we would get our revenge, oh, and what sweet revenge it would be! When it was the guys turn at bat they were the senior men who were dating the Freshman girls and it was the senior women who were so jealous. Well, not really. In fact the senior women did not seem to really care at all, which kind of makes it not such sweet revenge. Oh well. All in all though freshmen year was pretty darn fun. It finally felt like we had some freedom compared to the prison-like conditions at the middle school.

Our Sophomore year came and everything was old news. We were no longer a center of attention, there were new freshmen who took that away from us. We had done that Homecoming thing, we had done that Winter Formal thing; nothing excited us, we wanted something big to happen....something that would change our lives again for a second time....we wanted to drive! Yes, a Road Trip would never again be a week-end excursion with the parents, now it was that first friend who got his license with fifteen friends crammed inside his mom's car with no place to go. As weak as this sounds, we were now a class that could travel great distances to have a good time.

Junior year meant finally being an upper-classmen and it brought a new excitement to everything. And more importantly, now when we drove somewhere we had someplace to go. The greatest thing about junior year?...Was it the ability to finally drive to school? No....was it commons periods? No....was it going to our first pumpkin roll? No...

was it A.P. History with "Captain" Fordyce?....No, but your getting closer....Do you give up? The best thing about Junior year was the fact that now we only had one year of school left, and it was our senior year!

Yet now as I look back on that thought, was it really that great? One year left till graduation, yeah that was great. But one year to see so many people for the last time after all we had been through? What was going to happen to our Class? Never in the history of our high school was there such a class that has gotten along so well and had so much fun as a whole. Through the thrill of freshman year, we stayed together, through the dullness of our sophomore year, we stayed together, through the excitement of finally becoming an upper-classmen as a junior, we stayed together. And finally our senior year arrived. It was time to have some fun....together. And that we did.

So do not let the fun stop. Keep it going in the heart with your emotions and keep it going in the head with the good memories. But whatever you do, do not get nostalgic. The good experiences have to keep on coming. If you do not keep them coming, you are bound to drive yourself crazy. You will start re-living your youth. And you will probably be arrested for attempting to steal a 515 pound pumpkin (squash or whatever it was) when you are 45 years old.

Casey Abley and Betsy Sutliff show their long time friendship throughout the years.

Left: Who are those Mighty Morphin Power Rangers? Could it be Jon O'Hara and Allyson Klebes? I think so.

Above: Basking in the privileges of the Senior lounge three Senior men, Rob Boutell, Robert Hageman, and Mark Mowls, show us their best poses.

In academics we recall

Classroom Memories

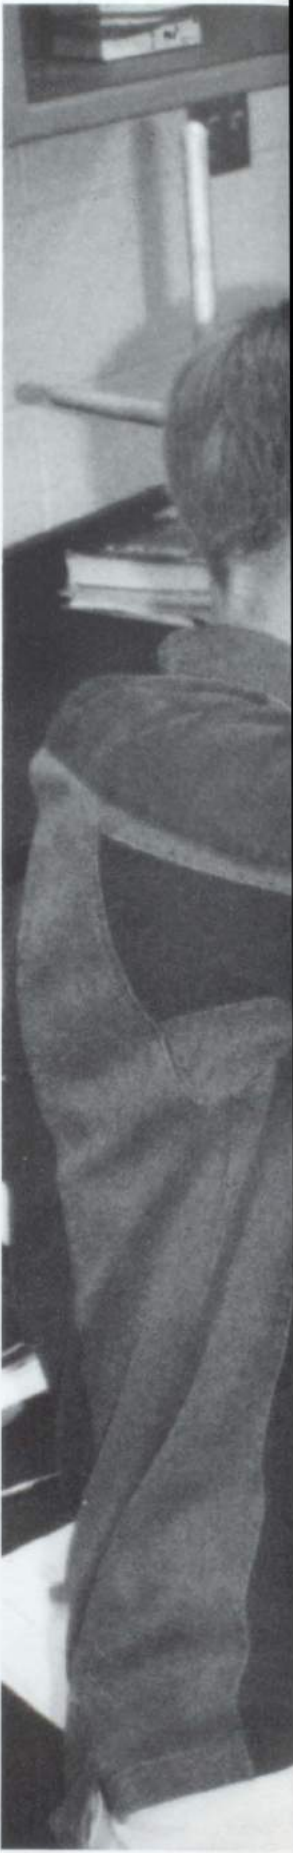

Lockers slamming, students running, books dropping, desks scraping, pencils sharpening, notebooks clicking and teachers vying for attention,---it is all a part of the everyday ritual of getting ready to learn something. It was repeated at least once every hour, for seven hours a day, for 180 days of the year. It's the real reason that we had to go to school--to learn something--to get the respectable GPA so that we could graduate and go somewhere else. Our goal was to survive the courses, teachers, quizzes, tests, lab experiments, reports, essays, lectures, and field trips, so we could get on with our life. Academics, for many of us became that necessary obstacle that had to be overcome--the real tiger that had to be tamed--for it and only it stood in our way of true fulfillment and our future happiness so we believed.

But what will we really remember about our classes, our teachers, and all that information that was dumped into us over the course of the year ten or twenty years from now? After all, it did take up the majority of our waking day, didn't it? Will it merely be an enormous blur in our minds? Thirty years from now, will there be one single classroom event that we will be able to recall, let alone the names of our teachers?

Zenith believes that we should approach our academic experience more retrospectively. For that reason we asked a group of seniors to share with us some of their high school classroom memories--particular events that they found memorable because it left some lasting impression on them. We have included their anecdotes in our Academic section. Perhaps their shared experiences will remind all of us of our own impressionable high school experiences that we may not have forgotten, after all.

Computer Command

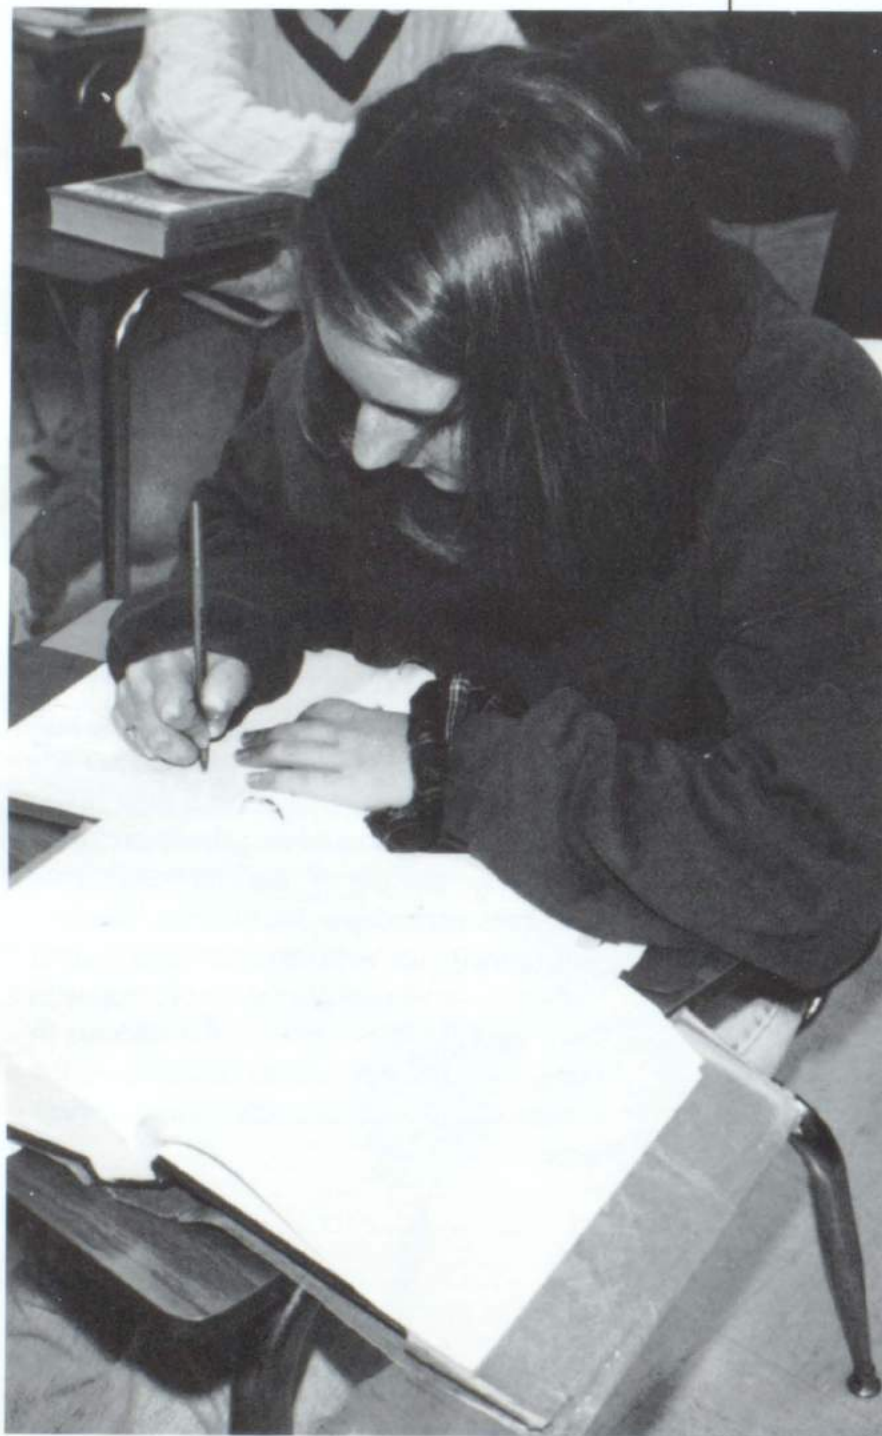

Above: Andrew Stephenson takes a minute out of his computer drafting assignment to smile for the camera. The computer drafting lab and program was a new addition to the curriculum this year.

Many changes have been done to the computer resources this year at the high school. The most convenient was the new addition of computers in the commons, in the library, and the availability of computers throughout the day. SIRS, a research program, is also an addition to the library for on-line research. Students now have the advantage of doing research projects from any computer in the school.. A new computer lab was added to run AutoCad, a state of the art Computer Aided Drafting Program. The new technology allowed students to experience industry standard drafting programs. The computer courses have been updated to include many resources available to students. A student bulletin board system available to all students for electronic mail, messages, and chats. The students can also have the knowledge to dial in via modem from their home computers to use any of the school's network resources. The use of the computers have even been expanded to the in-school suspension room for use with behavior modification software. As you can see the use of computers have been made available to the students in many aspects from both the freedom of the commons to the solitude of in-school suspension.

Thirst for Knowledge

This catchy phrase, "the thirst for knowledge" has been around the mathematics department at Chagrin Falls High School for a long time. Math teachers came up with this slogan to push their students and encourage them to always try their hardest and do their best. Each teacher has his or her own special way of making students excel. For example, most teachers use the form of evaluation called pop quizzes-- every student's worst nightmare. The goal of the pop quiz is not to hurt the student's grade, but instead to try and help them improve their study habits and consequently prepare for future evaluations. Mr. Lonchar's form of the pop quiz is called the zip strip. This quiz is timed and oral questions are not repeated. All students dread zip strips but they are only meant to help the student learn more. As the year progresses, the time for answering each question gets shorter and shorter. But who can forget Mr. Howell? He always has a "goooooood quiz" prepared for his students every Friday. These forms of evaluation are only meant to improve the study habits of each student. This "thirst for knowledge" can be found within all dedicated math students at Chagrin Falls High School.

The Physics Lesson

One day, in the anticipated class of A.P. Physics with Mr. Roberts, a demonstration was done in front of the class. We were studying a chapter on pendulums. Mr. Roberts usually gave enlightening lectures on each chapter and many different "fun" problems to solve. But on this particular day he decided we would have an even more enjoyable time than usual. Mr. Roberts decided to show us one of his ever impressive demonstrations that even involved audience participation. He asked for a volunteer and Jon immediately raised his hand. Mr. Roberts had a metal weight attached to a string hanging from the ceiling. He showed us that if he raised this weight up to a certain height and then let go, the weight would not go above that original height. This was just like a pendulum. He wanted to prove this to us by raising the weight up to his forehead, letting go, and letting it swing all the way back up just missing his head. He then brought Jon up in front of the class. He raised the weight up to Jon's forehead, gave him a reassuring word that the weight would not hit him, and then let go. Unfortunately, as seemed to be the trend with Mr. Robert's demonstrations, it did not work. The weight came right up and conked him on the forehead. He was quite stunned and all he could seem to utter was, "Mr. Roberts, I think that just hit me." Mr. Roberts apologized profusely as the class just roared with laughter at another very impressive physics demonstration.

Closing the Culture Gap

At the end of March in junior year, my French class went to France for a two week long educational vacation. It was all tremendously exciting, that is getting ready to go across the ocean to a foreign land. Don't get me wrong, I thoroughly enjoyed the trip, but it had its ups and downs. Anyway, the day to leave the good ol' USA finally came and I thought I was ready, willing and able. We got on the plane headed for Geneva, Switzerland, where our tour started. Well, we landed fine and dandy and to make a long story short we spent the next few days traveling through Switzerland, Italy and southern France.

I remember those warm nights in southern France well because that was the first place that I ate octopus. We had the octopus in a soup and once some people found out what was in it, they very nearly threw up, but I ate my octopus, tentacles and all. Oh, we saw many marvelous castles and stuff, but the really significant event happened at a place called Chambord. Chambord is the largest chateau in the Loire valley, but enough of that historical junk! The good things started to happen when a particularly young attractive young woman entered the chateau. All of the guys on the trip immediately noticed her and we believed she noticed us. Unfortunately, the time to leave Chambord came. While we were walking away from the chateau, the beautiful woman walked a few yards behind us. Eventually, we got back on our tour bus proclaiming our love for the young woman. Well, one of the girls on the trip decided to play a joke on us. She told us that the woman's name was Rita and that she was not only moving to the U.S., but to Columbus, Ohio. She told the story very convincingly and we believed her. We decided to devote our lives to finding her in the USA.

Near the end of our trip, the cruel-hearted girl revealed her lies to us. Needless too say, we were crushed..

One day I entered Mr. May's third period Honors English class expecting nothing special. It was a normal day, and nothing seemed out of the ordinary. I took my seat and waited for class to begin, chatting with some of the people around me while Mr. May sat coolly at the front of the room, sizing up the class. We were mere freshmen in his eyes; students who had just entered the high school and had no idea what to expect from the people in this new building, and he was about to take advantage of this. Mr. May rose and began his lecture on the book that we were reading. I followed along, taking notes, just like I would on any normal day. Illustrating his dialogue with marks on the board, Mr. May knew that he had the class right where he wanted them. Because of this, we were completely unprepared for what happened next. As Mr. May was talking, a senior wrestler entered the room. He appeared calm and apparently desired to speak with our English teacher about something, and we thought little of his entrance. If anything, we were glad to have a small break in the process of note taking. Mike approached Mr. May and asked if he could speak with him about a matter dealing with his involvement on the wrestling team, as our teacher also held the position of Athletic Director at Chagrin. Mr. May repeatedly stated that he was in the middle of a class and would speak with him later, but Mike kept insisting. Gradually, the dialogue between the two became more and more heated, and it was discovered that Mr. May had found chewing tobacco in Mike's locker and kicked him off the team. Mike called the action "unfair" and demanded to be placed back on the team, and eventually began yelling in Mr. May's face. Mr. May tried to keep his voice under control, and told him not to "act tough in front of the freshman." Putting his hands on Mike's shoulders Mr. May tried to guide him towards the door. The highly agitated student snapped at this moment. Mike pushed his arms off and shoved Mr. May back, saying, "don't touch me!", and then decked him, hurling obscenities. As Mr. May hit the floor, Mike bolted from the room. We as freshman had been staring incredulously at this confrontation. Little did we know that it was all a joke, and part of Mr. May's lesson for the day..

Junior Julia McLaughlin is the assistant field commander for the Chagrin Falls marching band. She shares this responsibility with seniors Paul Breitzmann and Adam Wendling. Julia says that everyone who has seen the band perform is impressed with its ever increasing size. Julia "hopes to be the head field commander next year." There is a very good chance that she will be. Julia received C.V.C. honors in band and is first chair for the clarinet which she has been playing for the last seven years. In addition to her band responsibilities, she also participates in soccer and softball. She hopes to go to college out East and major in law or political science and minor in music. Julia is originally from Massachussetts where, ironically, they did not have a marching band.

Disney from Down Under

Last April the jazz band traveled to Orlando, Florida to compete in a contest hosted by Disney World, but our most unique experience of all came in our performance in the Magic Kingdom itself.

We arrived at Disney World on our final day and the jazz band met behind the scenes to change into our ties and blue blazers (which were extremely uncomfortable considering the 90 degree weather). We then took our bus to a location unknown to us, during which our guide informed us that we were one of only eight high school groups that were allowed to play in Disney World during the year.

We reached our destination and unloaded our equipment. The building we were in front of was a huge structure with a giant cave-like entrance to an elaborate tunnel system under the Magic Kingdom. As we walked through the tunnel, we passed dozens of rooms where the workings of the park were conceptualized and created. We also passed dozens of racks of clothes and costumes looking as if someone had carried out a giant massacre on all of the Disney characters; the disembodied Goofy head would probably have been pretty traumatic to a small child. Finally, we reached a small, strangely -shaped hexagonal room that looked like a decompression chamber from the outside. By this time our guide had explained to us exactly what we would be doing, and we were ecstatic. We situated ourselves in the room, which for 17 boys, our director, and all of our equipment was extremely cramped. In addition, there was a giant video screen and a few light towers in there with us. After a brief warm-up we waited tensely for what we all knew was about to occur. And then it happened!

The floor started to slowly rise, and the ceiling of the 2-or 3-story-tall room began to slide away. We started playing our first piece, extremely nervous, but excited beyond all belief. Finally, we reached the top of our destination: the front of Tomorrowland Cafeteria. The room was packed with several hundred people eating their lunch and watching us play. And play we did, as we put on the best performance in the history of the jazz band. It was great! In fact, during the performance, I saw people dancing while we played. That was really thrilling. After 45 minutes of playing and thunderous applause, we were lowered back into the bowels of the Magic Kingdom with a number of little kids peering over the edge of the ceiling at us to see where we were going. When we reached the bottom, a long series of high-fives, handshakes, and cheers were in order. It was an experience I'll never forget!

Business Sense

The business program led by Mrs. Getz in her first year at CFHS gave students an insight to the world of business. The classes taught in this program were business law, accounting, and marketing. The business law classes were able to attend a mock trial at Cleveland State. They also had many guest speakers throughout the year. The marketing classes were involved in making their own company and also advertising them. They also learned market stimulating on the computer. The accounting classes also dealt with the computers, learning accounting stimulating. Because these courses were offered students were enabled to prepare for a highly competitive world. With the sufficient exposure in the use of accounting, marketing, and business law, students were able to master skills that will aid them in college as well as business careers. Whether learning how to understand a contract in Business Law, dealing with financial responsibilities, or developing company, students finally found classes that legitimately answered the question, "When am I going to need this?"

The Music Makers

This year's choir includes many underclassmen, which made the choir work even harder than usual. The choir started off with the fall concert. It was not only a great success and a fun time, but it brought the choir together as one. The choir was also involved with the C.V.C. Festival at Solon. During Christmas time the group had the chance to travel to the Arcade in downtown Cleveland for caroling. They also sang for the lighting of the tree ceremony in Chagrin. All in all, the year was a great success for both the mixed choir and the women's choir.

Artistic Perceptions

It's a really good feeling when you can relate something from one class to another and then to an important aspect of your life.

In A.P. art I need to submit a portfolio and have an overall theme for it called a "concentration." I decided to focus on things lacking appreciation and most often taken for granted. I was having a hard time figuring out what objects I wanted to paint. I found myself in what can be called an "artistic ditch." The reason for my inability to focus on my art theme came to me in my psychology class later that week. We were discussing "self-actualization" and how one who is self actualized is more apt to notice things whether it be in art, in nature or in everyday encounters. I then began analyzing what was just told to me, and then realized that it had a direct relationship to the theme of my art work. Since I was not "self actuated", I had been unable to appreciate things in order to paint them. Once I was able to understand the root of my problem, I found it much easier to work toward a solution.

My artistic crisis was a valuable life lesson for me. It taught me that if you relate what you learn in class to yourself and your own life, you are likely to learn something very valuable that you can carry around with you for the rest of your life.

During the school year there is always a person who stands out in Physical Education, a mentor master of all the gym tricks, and trades, a Gym Hero! There can only be one with such skill, agility, and a sense of pride to hold the mighty gym status Erik Roza has acquired. In having an exclusive interview with Erik, he told us some of the things he does to warm up that gives him his cutting edge.

Why is gym so important?

"I feel that it prepares me for the real world, and makes me the best I can be."

Who was your gym god when you were a freshman? "I think there's only one gym god and that's Wem. He essentially raised me from small dog to top dog."

What are some of your pre-gym rituals? "Before gym I repetitively slam my head against a locker, and say I'm the best."

What's your best gym memory? "Team Handball: 3 assists, 5 goals, self-proclaimed offensive, and defensive player of the game." "What gives you the drive?" "I can attribute it to having very, very, very, strong frustrations."

Like a Pancake on Asphalt

Athletics have never been my strong suit. It's not that I don't like sports, I do; it's just that I am not particularly good at any of them. I played soccer in the fifth grade. I was the goalie; apparently I had quick reaction time to any object sent hurling through the air in my direction. That is about the extent of my athletic abilities, however. Running, in particular, has always been a dreaded activity. I admire anyone who can go half a mile without panting like a dog stranded in the Sahara. I always thought my running skills, or lack thereof, was what held me back in sports; last May I found out that was only a small part of the problem.

I am required to take gym because I do not play any sports and I enjoy this part of the day even though the physical activity rarely goes beyond bouncing a basketball while talking to Mr. Wem about an ache in the lower forearm. Last May, however, as the year was coming to a close and the now infamous gym final was nearing the horizon, our class was to learn the meanings of each of the colored lines on the track. This involved action. We would go out and have a little relay using the batons in order to help the process along. What harm could come of this? So I got in place on the track, ready to retrieve the baton from behind me. I saw my team member approaching out of the corner of my eye and began to run; or tried to run, at least. I fell, actually, as soon as I was about to start. I was looking up too high, or down too low, perhaps, and missed my target. In any case, I fell flat on my face in a pancake-like position. Both of my knees were severely injured. It was a bloody mess to look at. I was escorted to the clinic by a friend who was more than happy to get out of class. She applied about a gallon of benzol peroxide to each knee than bandaged them up. The bandages were in a prime position so every time I stood up or sat down and bent my knees, they either shifted or fell off. I went through a couple of boxes of gauze during this time and got to know the local pharmacist very well. I didn't even need to ask for the first aid supplies, he had a stock with my name on it ready and waiting. Two weeks after my fall, with the white bandages still strategically placed, it seemed, people were still asking if I was a full time volleyball player. (notice the irony here)

And now as I look at my knees, I observe with dismay the faded black and blue marks which have been there since last June, a constant reminder of the track incident which proves that even if you can run, but lack coordination, you're not much more than a pancake on the asphalt.

My Favorite Class

My favorite class in my four years at Chagrin Falls High School was definitely Mr. "Wild Bill" Fordyce's AP American History Class. The class was small to begin with, and became smaller as people left or got kicked out for having too much fun. The class was primarily made up of males, only one female (occasionally) attended the class. Quotes of Mr. Fordyce include "good chance of a quiz tomorrow", "Take out a half sheet of paper", "umm, no you can't use your notes", "Yes Ryan - are you sure Ryan?". And no AP History Student of 1993-1994 can forget the words "Barney" or the disputed KKK membership figures. Nor do they forget Mr. Fordyce's approach to essay writing. We enjoyed discussing Mr. Fordyce's proximity to school and to civilization. We enjoyed his grading scale. We prepared long and hard for the AP test, Mr. Fordyce, out of the kindness of his heart, had review sessions every night for two weeks. He promised us a "party" if anyone scored a five. At least two students did.

Throughout the year, there were liberals, conservatives, losers, winners, smart students and bad students. But on one of the final days of class, we were watching a military ceremony on CNN. The ceremony marked the 50th anniversary of D-Day. As the band struck up the National Anthem, the class joined in unity the singing of the "Star-Spangled-Banner." Mr. Fordyce and all of us were a little choked up, as we were reminded that regardless of our differences, we were all Americans who had spent a year learning to appreciate our great nation.

Clubs, past and present are Traditional Fare

If academics are the mind of the high school, then clubs have to be the heart, and maybe even the soul. For what would the school be without all of those special after school and during school activities that allow us to forget the drudgery of academia. (Whoops, we're not supposed to say that!) But let's face it folks, the school's organizations this year really helped sweeten this whole school thing, taught us responsibilities that we never had before, and for a lot of us, forced us into leadership roles that at one time we would have shirked.

Clubs are nothing new at Chagrin. Even these seem to have become a part of a long tradition that seem to have held on year after year. A quick glance through the 1974 yearbook shows us just how stable our student club program has become. The featured student organizations that year were Student Council, Ski Club, Forensics Club, Latin, Spanish, German, and French clubs, Drama Club, Zenith, Prism, the school newspaper (The Lantern), AFS, NHS, and Key Club. It's really not all that different than the clubs we feature this year. Oh sure, some have fallen by the wayside, but then we've added a few like Weightlifting, Channel 4, Art Club, Teen Institute, SADD, Science Club, Project support and Peer Care.

Of course, there are degrees of participation in a lot of these organizations. Some clubs meet rarely, while others meet on a weekly basis. Organizations like Zenith, Tiger Times, and Channel 4 have become so vital to the school, that the clubs have been absorbed into the curriculum and meet on a daily basis. In our yearbook coverage of clubs this year, we have tried to feature those organizations that have made a significant contribution to the school over the year. We have, however, done our best to include all of our clubs for 1994-95 as a record for posterity.

Weightlifting club members Josh Armbruster and Geoff Lockert pumpit up after school in the high school's weight room. Weight training is a necessity for increasing strenth and stanima for many student atheletes in the school.

Junior, Megan Rowland helps a Sands student as a function of Project Support, a student led tutoring program.

CHANNEL FOUR

Chagrin Falls High School is one of the very few High Schools in Northeastern Ohio to have its very own television studio right in the building. Channel Four is almost like a regular studio at a television station like Channel Three or Channel Five but on a much smaller scale. During the previous years, the popularity of the station has grown enough so that it is now an optional class in CFHS. Students who take Channel Four are required to learn the parts of all the sound and video equipment and also how to operate all the equipment. Each morning, the announcements are recorded by Channel Four students and broadcast in all of the homerooms. They change jobs every week so that each person can become familiar with all the equipment. Most of the equipment that is used in Channel Four has been donated by companies who make the equipment. A new addition to the studio this year is a teleprompter that was donated by Jon Day. The teleprompter is used during the morning announcements so the announcers can look directly into the camera for a more professional look. Howard Swartz of VGI donated computer cabinets to Channel Four in order for them to store some of their equipment.

SERVICE CLUBS

Of the many clubs available to Chagrin Falls High School students, the service clubs give members the chance to offer their time and help to others who need help in a certain way. One club that gives its members a chance to help students in the entire school district is Project Support. This club's main responsibility is offering tutoring services to anyone who needs help in any subject in the Chagrin school district. Some Project Support members take time out of their normal High School day's and tutor kids at Sands Elementary School. Project Support offers tutoring after school at Gurney, Sands, the Middle School and also the High School. Another function of Project Support is that they sponsor inservice training for people working with special needs students. This means that members can be trained in working with hearing impaired visually impaired people. This club in particular is one that is self gratifying because you work hands on with people who need help in certain areas.

King's Weightlifters

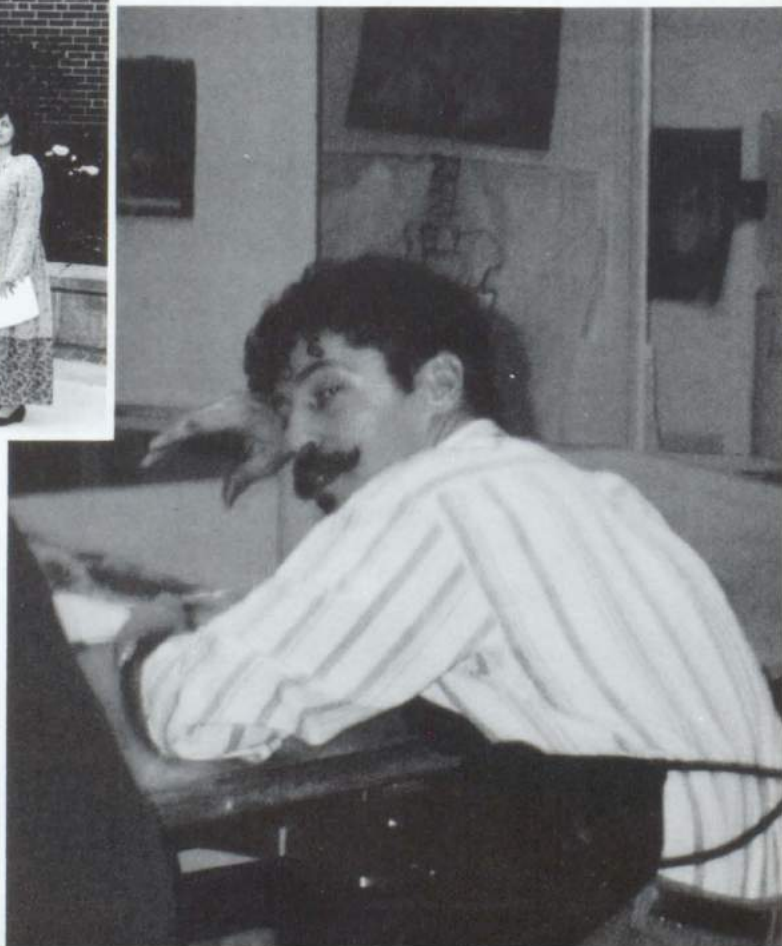

Weight lifting has become a popular extracurricular activity among students at Chagrin Falls High School. Weight lifting in the past couple of years has definitely come together for the better. It gives students something to do in their spare time, and they keep in shape at the same time. "It is a great program, and I am glad to be the supervisor," says Mr. King who is the head of weight lifting this year, and is a weight lifter himself. Students enjoy having Mr. King around. Reed Cornell says "He makes lifting fun, but safe." Weight lifting meets every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Not only can the people in weight lifting club use the facility, but sports teams use it to better their athletes in a particular sport. Coach Wem says, "The wrestlers use the room to strengthen themselves, so then can have the edge over their opponents." As you can see the weight lifting program has been a huge asset to our high school. The program should move onward and upward in the future.

STAR FLICKS

VIDEO ENTERTAINMENT CENTER

When I get older, my mommy says I'm going to go to High School and College. That's fine with me, but, right now I'm going to go to Star Flicks because they have the lowest prices around for new releases and other popular videos. I really like going there and spending only $1.49 for a New Release anytime Monday through Thursday. On Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays I still only have to pay $2.49 for a New Release. Star Flicks also has a great selection of Nintendo, Super Nintendo, Sega, and Sega CD for me to play!

out our great selection of videos, laser discs, and video games! We feature current and hard to find titles at the lowest possible price!

Congratulations Jason,

You are such a good son, brother, and friend. Always remember
Proverbs 3: 5&6. Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths. Thanks for many memories and good times. We are proud of you. Love Mom, Dad, Jess

Congratulations, Jen!

Todd,
Congratulations! You've worked hard to reach this milestone.
As you work hard in whatever path your life takes, remember the words of Isaiah 40:31, "but those who hope

To my last, but certainly not least Chagrin Falls High School graduate. Congratulations, Stephen!
And, to all three of my graduates, you have truly enriched and blessed my life.

Wasn't it just yesterday
That you hopped on that kindergarten bus and what happened
That those thirteen wonderful years
Disappeared
Before We knew
That the days of yesterday were only
A quick blink
From that first day, when you hopped
on that school bus
For the very first time.

Thanks for the great and memorable ride, TRAV!
Love Mom and Dad

One night a man had a dream. He dreamed he was walking along the beach with the Lord. Across the sky flashed scenes from his life. For each scene, he noticed two sets of footprints in the sand; one belonged to him, and the other to the Lord. When the last scene of his life flashed before him, he looked back at the sand. He noticed that along the path was only one set of footprints. He also noticed that it happened at the saddest times in his life. This really bothered him and he questioned the Lord about it. "Lord, you said that once I decided to follow you, with me all the way. But I have noticed that during the most troublesome times in my life, there is only one set of footprints. I don't understand why when I needed you most you would leave me." The Lord replied, "My precious, precious child, I love you and I would never leave you. During your times of trial and suffering, when you see only one set of footprints, it was then that I carried you."

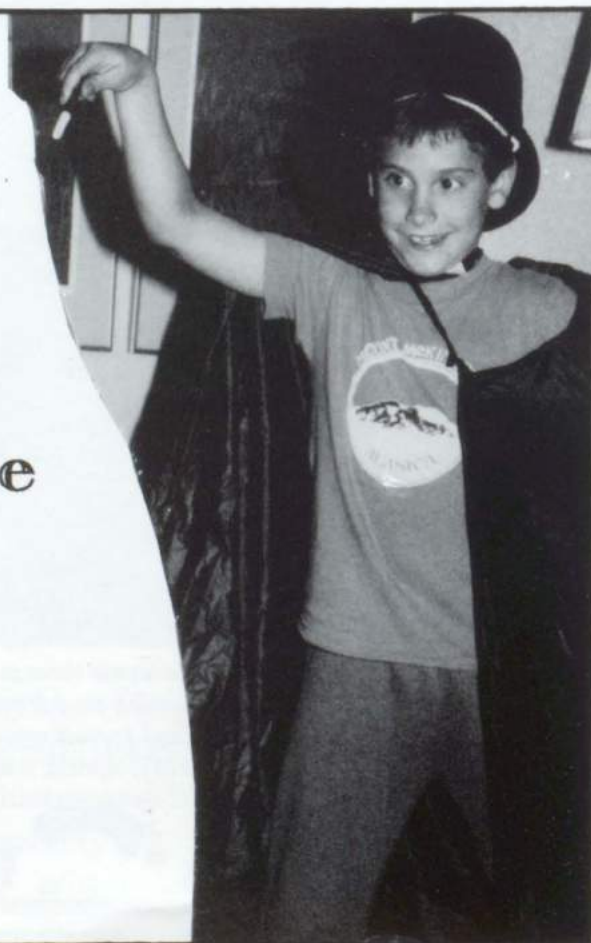

Congratulations, Colie!
We knew you could do it!

Wow! What a year it was! O.J. Simpson was inside everyone's life for what seems to be an eternity. Everyone in the country knew everything that they ever wanted to know about the former N.F.L. Star. Will the murder of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman ever be solved? Only time will tell.

The Major League Baseball players decided to go on strike August 13, 1994. The strike which would drag on endlessly, ended one of the Cleveland Indians most successful years ever. With the new alignment of the baseball divisions, the Indians were in the playoffs the day the strike began. The opening of Jacobs Field last April was an exciting moment for all Indians fans. This spectacular park finally brought some attention to the city on the lake.

Conclusion

World events also shaped our year. The fighting in Bosnia continued and innocent people continued to be killed. The United States tried to ignore the situation but was criticized for its "laissez faire" attitude.

The people of Japan experienced a horrible disaster in January when over 5,000 people lost their lives in a massive earthquake. Hundreds of thousands went without electricity for weeks while the country dug itself out of the rubble.

On a more positive note, the entertainment industry had a very successful year. Hit television comedy's like Seinfeld, Home Improvement, and Frasier were very popular and won numerous awards for their successes. Popular drama series such as N.Y.P.D. Blue and Melrose Place received much publicity because of controversial topics discussed on each program.

In the music industry, alternative rock became the newest sound to catch the attention of America's youth. By far the most successful band this past year was Green Day. Their first major album, Dookie, went platinum in its first month after release. Green Day performed in front of a sold out Blossom Music Center in their national tour last summer. Also, "Pearl Jam" released its much anticipated third album, Vitalogy. Like Dookie, Vitalogy was very popular in the United States. Other alternative bands such as Offspring, Soundgarden, and Stone Temple Pilots were also successful with new album releases.

This year was the year for the action movie. Speed, True Lies, and Clear and Present Danger were the major box office successes. But without a doubt, Forest Gump was the most popular film of the year. This movie appealed to audiences of all ages. The story of a special man who grew up in the baby boom generation touched the hearts of everyone who saw this movie.

While all these important world and national affairs were taking place, the traditional events back in Chagrin Falls continued. Blossom Time took place as usual over Memorial Day weekend and once again a new Queen was crowned. The Pumpkin Roll took place again in the middle of the night in early November. This year's "roll" attracted many parents which were an unwelcomed sight to determined rollers. Christmas trees and lights decorated Chagrin Falls to create a beautiful atmosphere once again during the holidays while the High School choir sang Christmas carols in Triangle Park to kick off the lighting ceremony.

While the world around us changed almost daily, we looked to our hometown traditions to provide us with the stability and memories that we will forever cherish.

Colophon

The 1995 Zenith was printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks of Shawnee Mission, Kansas. Press run was 400 copies. John Fowley served as company representative. Leonard Balk advised the publication.

Body and Caption copy is New Times Roman. Color usage is four point color. The cover was designed by David Stanton. The text paper is Bordeaux. The headlines used in the division pages, opening and closing were created using Corel Draw on an IBM PS/2. The layouts were created using Aldus Pagemaker. Zenith yearbooks sold for $35.00 and $38.00 personalized.

Special thanks to Mr. Leonard Balk, Mr. John Fowley, the entire Zenith Staff, the Chagrin Booster Club, and all of our ad patrons.
